WLB Steel Panel Hears Facts On Low Wages, Super-Profits

Union Proves Need For Wage Increase

By Joseph Keller

While the corporations have boosted their share of the national income 62 percent during this war, the relative share of the workers has actually declined almost 10 percent.

This was the startling fact exposed by Philip Murray last week in his testimony before the War Labor Board steel panel, which heard a mass of irrefutable evidence in support of the CIO United Steel Workers' demands for wage increases beyond the Little Steel formula.

Corporations which received 8 percent of the national income in 1939, raked in 13 percent during 1942. Farmers, which include corporate and bank landowners who got the major portion of the gravy, increased their share of the nation's total income from 5.9 percent to 7.1 percent, or a rise of almost 83 percent. Labor, the wage-earners who constitute over 80 percent of the population, received only 59.3 percent of the national income as compared to 65.7 percent in the last pre-war year.

Labor Share Declines

The decline in labor's share of the national income is even far greater than these figures indicate when it is considered that this share is now being divided among 12,000,000 more wage earners, and that an enormous portion of workers' incomes is paid out in price rises and the 20 percent pay roll tax.

The average steel worker ends in the red each week to the extent of $8.44. This debt he makes up by redeeming war bonds, digging into any savings he has put aside for a "rainy day," and principally by borrowing from loan sharks or increasing his debts to merchants.

Steel workers' straight-time

Cost-Plus Hogs

Roosevelt's "Hold-the-Line" order and the Little Steel formula have had no bearing on what the steel bosses have paid themselves in fat salaries during the war period.

Wartime salaries of steel corporation heads, who also own the biggest shares of stocks, rose 36.2 percent from 1939 to 1942. Some of the most vicious opponents of wage increases for the steel workers did, far better than the Eugene Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel, upped his salary take from $271,000 in 1939 to $527,000 in 1942—a boost of 94 percent.

Tom Girdler, head of Republic Steel, snatched a 60.7 percent salary raise for himself, bringing his 1942 salary to $275,000.

E. T. Weir, head of Weirton Steel, whose thugs are terrorizing and beating up CIO union men, netted $275,400 in 1942, "only" 52.1 percent more than his 1939 salary.

pay now ranges from 78 cents to $1.21 an hour, the average being $1.06. Their average weekly pay, before taxes and other deductions, is $56.04. This is no "silk-shirt" era for them, especially in view of the 43.2 percent rise in the cost of living since January 1941, as proved by the recent joint AFL-CIO survey. These figures were bolstered by the survey of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics showing cost of living of farm families has risen 42.6 percent.

What does the average steel worker spend his frozen wages for? Murray cited the budgets of 1,000 representative steel workers, whose earnings were paid out as follows:

For food per week, $18.51; housing, $25.31 a month; $16 a

Steel Barons Grab Gigantic War Loot

"Greed and profiteering of corporations" have caused the "present inflationary rise in prices and cost of living," charged the CIO United Steel Workers in a brief supporting its demand for a 17 cents an hour wage increase, which Philip Murray presented last week before the War Labor Board steel panel.

A devastating barrage of facts about war profiteering and the ability of the steel corporations to pay the demanded wages without boosting steel prices was hurled at the panel by Murray.

Corporate profits before taxes increased on the average 406 percent in 1942 over the pre-war record years of 1936-1939. The estimated increase for 1944 is figured conservatively at 449 percent.

Net profits, after taxes and all other costs, rose 175 percent in 1943, and are expected to shoot up to 200 percent this year. This is in contrast to the 15 percent maximum wage increase over January 1941 which the workers are permitted under the Little Steel formula.

SWOLLEN PROFITS

For the steel industry itself, the net profits before taxes from 1940 through 1942 averaged $752,198,000 a year, an increase of 244.5 percent, and "the 1942 profit showed an amazing increase of 344.8 percent."

From the enormously swollen steel profits, and assets of over 6 billion dollars in 1942, the coupon clippers have sliced off 59.1 percent more dividends, holding in reserve as undistributed profits $94,035,000, which have expanded by almost $235,000,000 during the war.

Another third of a billion dollars, representing hidden profits, has been soaked away by the steel

CRDC Launches Campaign For 10,000 Signatures By July 1

The National Office of the Civil Rights Defense Committee announced this week that an intensive national campaign was opened on April 1st to gather 10,000 signatures or petitions by July 1st. These petitions protest the imprisonment of the 18 and urge President Roosevelt to grant the 18 Socialist Workers Party and Minneapolis Truckdrivers Local 544-CIO members unconditional and immediate pardon.

August Scholle, Regional Director, CIO Political Region 6,

National CIO Political Action Committee, denounced the imprisonments this week in a letter to James T. Farrell, Chairman of the Civil Rights Defense Committee. He writes:

"It is my considered judgment that the unreviewed conviction in the Federal Court at Minneapolis of 18 labor unionists stands as one of the gravest present challenges to the continued efficacy of the Bill of Rights. My attitude in the matter has nothing to do with the ideology of the defendants; it goes to the larger question of what the guarantees of free speech and press mean in the Constitution. And largest of all looms the proposition that the law now covers what a man may think. This latter proposition places the citizen completely under the domination of the judiciary, astounding as that point of view may seem.

SUPREME COURT

"I believe that this case is most definitely one in which the Supreme Court of the United States should have issued a writ of certiorari and rendered a decision on the constitutional point involved. Its failure to do so established a precedent that stands from now on as a threat to freedom of expression and freedom of thought. The fear that a constitutional guarantee might not be enforceable is just as much a restriction of liberty as the complete absence of the guarantee itself."

"You may use my name in support of any appeal made to the President of the United States for full and unconditional pardons for these 18 persons..."

John M. Holly, President of the Future Outlook League, who spoke together with George Novack, National CRDC Secretary at the Cleveland CRDC meeting during Mr. Novack's visit to that city on March 26, wrote:

"After studying the case of the 18 Minneapolis prisoners convicted for alleged sedition, and following my attending your meeting on last Sunday evening in the Allerton Hotel, I am thoroughly convinced that the men and women involved are not only entitled to, but should have a thorough, unbiased hearing in this case. If the case against these persons is allowed to go uncontested, it will not be long before every group in America will eventually suffer a similar fate on practically any trumped up charges, by groups whom we may oppose or disagree with. You may depend upon me to assist in every way possible to seek the release of the Minneapolis prisoners."

CRIME DETAILS

The details of this crime are a matter of public record. The before-dawn attack on Trotsky's residence was made by 25 to 30 gangsters, who broke into the building hurling incendiary bombs and spraying machine gun bullets. They burst into the bedroom of Trotsky and his wife Natalia, ripping to pieces with machine gun slugs the bed on which the elderly couple had had a moment before been sleeping. The intended victims awakened at the first sound of firing and hid in a dark corner of the room. They thus miraculously escaped the assassins.

Manpower Shortage Created To Screen Reactionary Plot

Roosevelt Spurs Campaign for Labor Draft As Union Heads Maintain Silence on Issue

By C. Thomas

Under cover of an artificially created manpower shortage, the administration is campaigning to whip up public sentiment in favor of Roosevelt's forced labor proposal. The campaign was launched under Roosevelt's order of February 26, directing Selective Service to review the draft status of men between the ages of 18 through 37 who were occupationally deferred. It came to a head with the issuance of a directive by Major General Lewis B. Hershey, Director of Selective Service, to all draft boards ordering immediate pre-induction physical examinations for occupationally deferred men between the ages of 18 and 26. It was announced that 1,000,000 men in this category were to be drafted no matter what the effect on war production.

Business Week, voice of the money bags cynically announces: "Manpower crisis in March," said Business Week on Dec. 11. Army and Navy have precipitated the crisis right on schedule."

The government announcement elicited a howl from the heads of the various civilian agencies and spokesmen for industrial groups who contended that such blanket withdrawals of key men would create a manpower tangle which would be "disastrous" to "some of the nation's most vital war programs." Administration spokesmen then countered with a proposal to draft 4-Fs and men between the ages of 38 and 45 for work in essential industries—those unfit for military service who were not employed in "essential jobs" to be drafted into Army labor battalions. The essence of the administration proposal is to fill the vacancies created in drafting men for military service by a forced labor draft of civilian workers.

"LABOR" REPORTS

"Union chieftains," reports Labor, official organ of the Railroad Brotherhoods, "voiced frank skepticism over the sudden hysteria. They pointed out it came at a time when, on the military side, over 4,000,000 soldiers are already abroad, and millions more at home, and on the industrial side, thousands of workers are being laid off daily due to cutbacks."

Frank Fenton, AFL organizer, and a member of the War Manpower Commission's labor-management committee, declared: "The whole scare seems to add up to a new effort to drum up sentiment for the discredited 'national service act.' Having failed in his initial attempt to put over a labor draft under the hysteria whipped up after General Marshall's attack on labor, Roosevelt is now executing a flank attack, by manufacturing a 'manpower shortage.' Actually, the argument of a manpower shortage is as full of holes as a Swiss cheese. A few weeks ago the Truman committee reported that the peak of manpower requirements had been passed, and, as a matter of fact, unemployment is becoming serious

A resolution issued by the Local 365 executive board states: "Local 365 recognizes that the indictment of Thomas De Lorenzo is nothing more than a reactionary attempt to crush labor. The executive board goes on record to give Brother De Lorenzo all the necessary moral and financial aid required because of the indictment."

Briggs Local Calls

for Revocation of

No-Strike Pledge

DETROIT, Mich. — The

workers of Briggs Local 212

UAW-CIO, held on Sunday, March 26 voted unanimously to request the International

Executive Board to call a special convention in order to rescind

the no-strike pledge. The president of the Briggs Local sent out notices to all the other UAW locals asking "that you follow our example by petitioning the International to call a special convention for this purpose."

The letter further demands "that the Little Steel Formula be broken" and argues "that if every Local Union gets solidly behind this program and sends telegrams to Brother Murray, this pressure will assist him in this very important fight. We also believe that the revocation of the nostrike pledge is the only way to bring some of the uncooperative companies to terms."

that he does not fear the police" and that he doesn't care a hang about the charges still pending against him in the First Penal Court—charges of the crimes of attempted homicide, discharging of firearms, house-breaking, and property damage."

The next day, the same paper reported:

"The judge of the First Penal Court has already declared that his order of arrest against the artist and fugitive from justice, although never carried out, still remains in force, but that it is outside his jurisdiction to see that it is carried into effect."

What is this mysterious power that renders a fugitive from justice immune, enabling him to flee and reenter Mexico at will, and to flout the courts? It is the power of Siqueiros' employers in the Kremlin, the power of Stalin's GPU, whose assignment to assassinate Leon Trotsky this criminal tried to carry out in May 1940.

TRADE UNION NOTES

When President Sherman Dalrymple of the CIO United Rubber Workers arbitrarily suspended 72 members of the Akron General Tire and Rubber Local 9 for participation in a strike, he stirred up a real hornets nest. Among the key locals which came to the support of Local 9 was the important Goodrich Local 5, which issued a sharp resolution condemning Dalrymple's dictatorial action.

The resolution, reprinted in Local 5's publication, Air Bag, charges that Dalrymple suspended the 72 Local 9 militants "without trial or hearing, in direct violation of their rights as provided in the URWA constitution," and that Dalrymple's methods are those fostered by the corporations "to split the labor movement by unjust and undemocratic discriminatory actions."

Air Bag affirms that "our local gives solid support to the General Local 9 members who have been wrongfully expelled by President Dalrymple and fired from their jobs. . . We are confident that the membership of the URWA will join us in this fight to PRESERVE DEMOCRACY in the labor movement once the facts are known!"

The U. S. Supreme Court last week in a 7 to 2 decision upheld the findings of two lower federal courts approving portal-to-portal pay for iron miners. This decision requiring that iron miners be paid for underground travel time to the working face of a mine is also expected to affect favorably 530,000 coal miners who last year fought four national strikes to win portal-to-portal pay.

In the majority opinion, written by Justice Frank Murphy, there is a vivid description of the hazards of underground travel. The miners ride to their places of work in "ore skips" and often are forced to jump several feet from the loading platforms into the skip, which frequently results in injuries.

The men have to ride bent over to avoid striking their heads against low ceilings and beams. "Thus they ride in 'spoon-fashion,' with bodies contorted and heads drawn below the level of the skip top. Broken ribs, injured arms and legs and bloody heads often result; even fatalities are not unknown."

These long rides are made "in the dark malodorous shafts" and "the exacting and dangerous conditions in the mine shafts stand as a mute, unanswerable proof that the journey from and to the portal involves continuous physical and mental exertion as well as hazards to life and limb."

Wood pulp and chemical concerns in Michigan have been using German prisoners of war as a source of cheap labor and to undercut the union wage scales of the CIO International Woodworkers Union. Now, according to the International Woodworker, March 22, the German prisoners have put "squarely behind the eight-ball. . . the bosses who thought they saw a source of profit in cheap prison labor."

Delegates from the aircraft locals of the CIO United Automobile Workers recently held a national conference in Chicago to draft a wage program for the industry. Presiding at the conference was UAW Vice President Richard T. Frankensteen, director of the union's aircraft division. He came to national notoriety when he supported the use of federal troops against the striking North American Aircraft workers in 1941 and is now on the extreme right-wing of the national leadership in an alliance with the Stalinists.

The conference adopted a six-point program of wage demands, including a general industry-wide wage raise. The only thing the conference didn't do is draft a program of effective union action to win the demands.

The variety of activity covered by reports from our agents has made this week's correspondence one of extreme interest. The main activity of the branches, of course, has been preparation for the Militant Subscription Campaign. Toledo: "Please double our present Militant bundle order as we will need more for the coming sub campaign and expansion of sub work here. . . We are glad to know of the restoration of second-class mailing rights which comes at the time of the new sub campaign."

San Pedro: "Increase our Militant bundle order by 200 more copies a week."

Seattle: "Please send us regular Militant sub blanks. We have about twenty left of all those you sent us recently."

Newark: "Our latest Red Sunday netted unusually good results. Two comrades canvassing in territory where sample copies of The Militant had been distributed brought in eight new subscriptions. In addition, two comrades selling in 'new' territory sold fifty-one copies of 'War-time Crimes of Big Business' while another team canvassing among sympathizers reported one renewal and several promises to renew. Thirteen assorted pamphlets were sold. They report that one colored sympathizer is so enthused with The Militant that he requested sub blanks 'so I can sell The Militant to my friends.'

Chicago: "I wish to say that The Militant for the last several months is really good. The variety barons in the form of so-called "reserves for depreciation, depletion and amortization" which soared 62 percent from 1939 to 1942.

STEEL BARONS GRAB HUGE WAR PROFITS

The brief proves that the steel corporations can pay all the wage increases demanded and still make more profits than in the pre-war years. Wages are part of costs,

If U. S. Steel production declined to 40 percent of capacity, corporations are guaranteed "normal" profits for two years after the war, no matter if they operate at as low as 40 percent capacity and regardless of their losses. Post-war tax refunds ensure continuous big profits to the steel companies, even if half the steel workers are walking the breadlines.

The transit situation in San Francisco is, to put it mildly, chaotic. There are two trolley systems, one privately owned and one city owned. Each system charges a different fare, 5¢ for the Municipal and 7¢ for the Market Street line. Salaries of the workers also vary, with higher wages prevailing on the Municipal line.

The Market Street employees conducted a long struggle to win wage increases equal to those of the Municipal line, an increase amounting to 7½¢ to 10¢ per hour. The case was brought before the War Labor Board two months ago, and was decided in favor of the men. The company appealed the case on the grounds that the raises exceeded the Little Steel formula. In spite of the threat of strike by the men the case dragged on and on through the courts.

San Francisco Carmen Given Run-around In Wage Dispute

By Robert Chester

SAN FRANCISCO, March 31—San Francisco motorists and conductors of the Municipal Railway Line stopped work Sunday, March 26 to hold a "meeting" and discuss the refusal of Mayor Lapham to grant wage increases recommended by the Board of Supervisors. The men threatened to stay off the job and "meet continuously until everyone was heard from" in an effort to win their demands. Only the promise of ten of the eleven supervisors to pass the wage increase over the mayor's veto prompted the men to call off the "meeting" and return to work. This apparently clear-cut solution now appears to be merely another maneuver in the anti-labor maneuverings of the city administration.

The transit situation in San Francisco is, to put it mildly, chaotic. There are two trolley systems, one privately owned and one city owned. Each system charges a different fare, 5¢ for the Municipal and 7¢ for the Market Street line. Salaries of the workers also vary, with higher wages prevailing on the Municipal line.

The union reacted strongly. Henry Foley, President of the AFL Carmen's Union Local 518 immediately announced the "meeting" for Sunday to protest the "double cross." Sunday morning the men came out solidly. Four hours later after promises by the Supervisors to grant an increase of 5¢ per hour instead of the original 7½¢, the men returned to work.

This action had another result. On Saturday, the day before the "meeting," the Market Street Line suddenly signed an agreement with its workers granting a raise to the level of the Municipal men. This was an obvious attempt to split the two Carmen's unions and prevent further unified action.

TWO FACTORS

Two other complicating factors enter into the dispute. First the Market Street Line has been dickering for the past few years to sell the line to the city. The asking price has been so outrageously high that all past attempts for ratification by the voters have failed.

Actually, as the brief shows specifically in the steel industry, the federal tax bills have "protected the vast accumulation of corporate profits and preserved many special privileges and benefits. In spite of the hue and cry that corporations are being taxed beyond endurance, the facts demonstrate that corporate profits, after taxes, are beyond any peace-time level."

Under the present tax law, the paid before taxes, and the WLB itself has stated in the Little Steel case, contrary to the contentions of the corporations, that "to propose that wages should be affected by profits after taxes is to propose that labor's return should be conditioned by the Government's impost on industry."

Specifically, as the brief shows specifically in the steel industry, the federal tax bills have "protected the vast accumulation of corporate profits and preserved many special privileges and benefits. In spite of the hue and cry that corporations are being taxed beyond endurance, the facts demonstrate that corporate profits, after taxes, are beyond any peace-time level."

An industry, like steel, with more than one and one-third billion dollars in resources," concludes the USA-CIO brief, "earning more than three-quarters of a billion dollars a year in profits before taxes, and with large portions of federal taxes refundable can surely meet the union's requested wage adjustment of less than a quarter of a billion dollars and the other requests of the union which amount to approximately 104 million dollars."

The next move is up to the men. So far the labor movement here has displayed much ingenuity in pressing its demands despite the restrictions of the Smith-Connally act and the threats of the Lapham administration. Where men have devised "meetings to discuss" and go on "fishing trips" and hold "prayer meetings to pray for a raise" we can expect many innovations. There will unquestionably be more developments on this case in the coming weeks.

STEEL UNION PROVES WORKERS RECEIVING INADEQUATE WAGES

month for utilities, ice and fuel; $16 a month for household maintenance and equipment; $270 a week for transportation, all but 42 cents for going to and from work; $1.66 a month for recreation, mostly for newspapers and magazines; $2.75 a week for tobacco and liquor; $10.82 per month for medical care.

The steel workers' brief stressed particularly the failure of the administration and Congress to fulfill the promised "stabilization" of profits and prices, as well as wages. The brief recalls that the Little Steel formula was based upon Roosevelt's 7-point program before Congress in April 1942, which included stiff taxes on corporate profits, a $25,000 salary limitation and price freezing.

A year later, although Congress had kicked out of the window all measures to limit profits and salaries or hold down prices, Roosevelt issued his infamous "hold-the-line" wage freeze order.

"The economic events since April 1942, reveal the most shocking injustices perpetrated on American workers," charges the USA-CIO brief. "Wage stabilization, as one point of the program, was immediately put into effect by the National War Labor Board. By executive order and the administrative policies of the Board, wage stabilization was studiously transformed into a national wage freeze."

In addition to the general 17 cents an hour wage increase, the union is seeking a number of other improvements, including: 1. a guaranteed weekly and annual wage; 2. a bonus for steel workers in the armed forces; 3. dismissal pay; 4. sick leave with pay; 5. a shift differential for those on night shifts; 6. six holidays with pay; 7. liberalized vacations with pay; 8. equal pay for equal work throughout the industry; 9. minimum pay for learners; 10. improved health insurance; 11. maintenance of membership and the dues check-off.

A particularly strong case was made for the guaranteed yearly wage and dismissal pay, in view of the guaranteed profits the government will provide the corporations for two years after the war and the big retirement pensions the corporation heads have voted themselves.

the top officialdom. Signs are multiplying that other local unions are ready to follow the example of the Briggs and Ford workers. The UAW bureaucrats are becoming panicky before the rising discontent of the rank and file. They have placed this question as one of the main topics of discussion at the special meeting of the full Executive Board to be held in New York City. The rank and file militants of the UAW are beginning to realize however that they themselves must take the initiative and coordinate their activity for a united effort to break through the straitjacket of the Little Steel formula.

The March 26 membership meeting of the Briggs local also voted unanimously for a strike vote under the Smith-Connally Bill and designated April 16 as the date for a special meeting at the Cass Technical High School to implement this vote.

There is growing sentiment in other UAW Locals for the revocation of the no-strike pledge which was foisted upon the unions by England: "Please convey to the Socialist Workers Party our deepest revolutionary solidarity with the imprisoned leaders. This inspires us with great confidence for the future. As soon as I received the two six-page issues of The Militant I passed them around the tool benches in the factory where I work and the workers thought they were great stuff. Yes, we are going to build the International and a strong British Section."

Trotskyists In Italy Issue Call For Socialist Struggle

Denounce the Betrayals by the Second and Third International; Summon Masses to Fight for Socialist United States of Europe

A very important document has just arrived in this country. It is the Manifesto issued by the Italian Trotskyists in the name of the Provisional National Center which has been constituted for the building of the Communist Internationalist Party (Fourth International). The text of this document is the first definitive proof that the genuine voice of revolutionary socialism is beginning to make itself heard amid the crucial events in Italy.

Calling upon the workers of the world to "unite on the principles of the class struggle," the Manifesto begins by a forthright condemnation of the treachery of the Second and Third Internationals. It states:

"Comrades, we issue this Manifesto in order to make clear our political position and our tasks with regard to the war, and the direction and development of political events. Our task is to show the working class the road to the socialist revolution — the socialist revolution that has been betrayed by the parties of the Second and Third Internationals which, repeating the treachery of 1914-1918, have gone over to the imperialist war camp under the slogan of 'national unity.'

"It is because of this type of politics that the working class of all countries lack revolutionary parties, while the unleashed war continues to starve, convulse and drown the whole world in blood."

Monstrous Deception

The Manifesto then goes on to expose in unambiguous terms the fraud that this is a war of "ideologies":

"It is a monstrous deception to explain the causes and aims of the present war as a conflict between democracy and fascism, in the manner of the parties of the Second and Third Internationals. It is a lie propagated all over the world, devised by the greed of world finance capital which seeks to divide the workers and the peoples, pitting them against each other in a war that is being fought solely for imperialist aims; a war that cannot solve but only aggravate the problems of the world crisis."

"The causes and aims of the war have nothing to do with an ideological struggle between democracy and fascism. The present conflict, a sequel to 1914-1918, constitutes the most dramatic event in modern history, and should be viewed within the framework of an entire epoch, an event predetermined by the insoluble crisis of world capitalist economy in its imperialist putrefaction."

The "democrats" and fascists alike pursue essentially the same aims. In the words of the Italian Trotskyists:

"The present war involves the clash of two powerful camps, both with well-defined aims. Both war camps are torn by internal conflicts which threaten with the further development of events to rip them apart, with each power struggling for its own interests, pursuing its own aims."

Hypocritical Pretenses

"Despite their hypocritical pretenses of democracy, the Anglo-American powers, basing themselves on their control of world markets, colonies and shipping lanes, are conducting with all their tremendous resources a war of conquest and for the establishment of their hegemony."

"The Axis powers — fascist to the marrow — are likewise fighting an imperialist war at a desperate attempt to upset the old balance of power, to impose a revision of the wealth of the world and to obtain access to the world markets, colonies and shipping lanes."

Then follows a brief paragraph with regard to the Soviet Union. This part constitutes the vaguest and weakest section of the document, as it fails to draw a distinction between the reactionary program of the Stalin regime and the progressive struggle of the Soviet masses

British Strike Wave Spreads As Workers Defy Repression

By LOUIS BONN

Britain's greatest militant labor upsurge of the past 18 years again threatens to spread, as over 135,000 coal miners and shipyard workers continue their strikes in defiance of the Churchill government's army draft threats and the frantic back-to-work appeals of their own traitorous union leaders.

Last week some 45,000 shipbuilding workers employed in the huge Tyneside, Clydeside and Belfast, North Ireland, shipyards joined the strike ranks of the 90,000 South Yorkshire coal miners who walked out over two weeks ago.

Government officials termed the current strike movement the "worst labor crisis" since the 1926 General Strike and spokesmen of the Fuel Ministry are voicing the fear that the Yorkshire struggle may spread amongst all the 700,000 British coal miners.

So far the government has been powerless to lure the strikers back to work with big promises and miserly concessions. The government is now trying to combine intimidation and still bigger promises in order to break the strikes without sacrificing the profit interests of the British owning class.

The strike of 25,000 Tyneside and Clydeside shipbuilders and engineers apprentices, protesting payment to safeguard the remaining conquests of the October Revolution. The Manifesto leaves the false impression that Stalin is merely an agent of Anglo-American imperialism, while in reality the Kremlin bureaucracy pursues its contradictory aims. The text of this section follows:

Soviet Union

"The Soviet Union, in the United Nations bloc, is bleeding itself white, not for revolutionary aims, but for the aims of Anglo-American imperialism. The promises of a democratic peace, of economic well-being and of liberty made by these Anglo-American democracies and concurred in by Stalin's government, are a deception just as in 1914-1918, and cannot by any means constitute the aims of the proletariat either of the Soviet Union or of any other country."

Warning that unless the workers pursue their socialist goal, reaction will continue to reign, the Manifesto states:

"Whatever the democratic regime of tomorrow may be — it will pave the way for reaction unless capitalism is abolished — it will be merely a capitalist government with the velvet glove covering the mailed fist against the proletariat."

The only way out is the road of socialism. The concluding section of the Manifesto calls upon the workers to resume their struggle for socialism despite and against the betrayals of the Social-Democrats and the Stalinists:

"The Second International has betrayed these socialist aims since 1914. The Third International has followed suit in the present war. Having organized and directed the defeats of the European workers, it has dragged the entire world proletariat including the Soviet Union into a useless war."

"Workers! It is necessary to struggle against the war without let-up, in order to achieve a just peace for all peoples."

The key lesson of our entire epoch — the urgent need and the paramount role of the proletarian party — is underscored:

"To accomplish these tasks a strong and disciplined Bolshevik-Leninist revolutionary party is necessary. Without revolutionary doctrine and a class party, the proletariat will come out of the war crushed by the treacherous policies of the Second and Third Internationals."

The Struggle

"The struggle for the building of the International Communist Party and for a Fourth International is the fundamental task of the vanguard of the proletariat; the sole condition for guiding the workers in the struggle for power, in the abolition of the capitalist state, and the construction of a socialist economy in Italy and the Socialist United States of Europe."

"To the social-patriotic Committee of National Liberation of the 'Sforzas', must be counterposed class organizations, the councils of workers, peasants and soldiers. To the capitalist slogans against a king — with or without a regency — a policy that serves only to safeguard the financiers, the industrialists, the church hierarchy, the landowners — in short, capitalism — must be counterposed the demand for a constituent assembly on the basis of freedom of the press, of assembly, of the right to strike, increases in wages, bread, the right to work, land to the peasants, and other slogans to prepare the rising of the proletariat, to pave the way for the socialist revolution in Italy and in the world."

The Manifesto which bears the signature of Rolando, Secretary of the Provisional Center, and which is dated Bari, December 15, 1943, concludes with the following slogans:

"Down with Fascism! Down with Capitalism!"

"Long Live the Socialist United States of Europe, United with the Workers of the World!"

"Long Live the Workers Revolution in Italy!"

"Long Live the Fourth International!"

The strength of the French underground is well illustrated in this picture, taken when underground fighters marched through Oyonnax, France, on their way to hold memorial ceremonies. Faces of cheering townspeople are blacked out to prevent reprisals by the Nazis.

Kremlin Makes Plans To Knife Italian Revolution

By James Cowan

Stalinist policy in Italy, following upon Moscow's action in establishing diplomatic relations with the regime of Badoglio-King Victor Emmanuel, is taking shape in the sinister form of a reactionary plot against the revolutionary movement of the insurgent Italian masses:

M. Ercoli, general secretary of the Italian Communist Party and well-known as an agent of Stalin's G.P.U., has revealed the nature of the Stalinist policy. It follows the pattern made familiar during the Spanish civil war in which the Stalinist agencies combined with the most reactionary political cliques for the purpose of strangling the Spanish revolution.

Upon his arrival in Naples last week, after having spent 18 years in the Soviet Union where he performed every dirty task assigned him by the Kremlin bureaucracy, Ercoli announced a program to be presented to the Italian Committee of National Liberation, calling for:

1. A "united front of democratic, liberal and anti-fascist forces."

2. Formal assurances that "the problem of state institutions" would be solved only by the entire nation through the convocation of a constituent assembly — after the war possible!

3. A new temporary government "deriving its strength and authority from the support of the great mass parties" and "capable of organizing a genuinely great war effort of the whole country, including primarily the creation of a strong Italian army to fight the Germans."

NO EXPLANATION

Abandoning without a word of explanation the previous opposition of the Italian Stalinists to Badoglio and the King, Ercoli declared that until after the war "we consider the King to be not a person but an institution and therefore there is no question of changing this institution now." The Italian workers certainly never regarded the King as just a "person." To them the monarchy and all its aides and supporters were also an "institution" — one which was and is symbolic of the capitalist system and of the fascist regime to which that system gave rise. In their fight against this symbol they have shown their determination to end that system and all it stands for.

The Stalinists, however, have ranged themselves openly on the side of the monarchist clique which the workers have steadily refused to tolerate, and on the side of the Allied imperialists without whose aid the clique and its supporters, the capitalists of

"We are against anything which would weaken the sacred struggle (read imperialist war) which we must carry on for our complete liberation from the shameful regime of Hitlerite occupation," Ercoli told an interviewer. Here, written plainly for all to see, is an announcement that the Stalinists intend to conduct a campaign of slander, intimidation, threats and even murder against every oppositionist element in the workers' ranks. Such oppositionists will be branded as "Trotskyite fascists" if they refuse to fall in line. The Stalinist Daily Worker issued several months ago ominous threats against political opponents in Italy. Now Ercoli, one of Stalin's G.P.U. agents is sent to Italy, to personally direct operations.

COUNTER-REVOLUTION

What is now in progress in Italy is a gigantic attempt to disorient, disorganize and throttle the whole movement of the revolutionary masses, to deliver the masses, bound and gagged, to the forces of capitalist counter-revolution. Badoglio and his monarchist generals proved impotent to halt the resistance. The Allied occupation forces are confronted more and more with active hostility and opposition. Now come the Stalinist misleaders, and attempt to use their

Ministries to eliminate Communism from the political map of Germany, the movement still lives and carries on vigorous activity, according to a New York Times dispatch from Stockholm which quotes "private information from a reliable source."

Nor is it just "Communism" of the bowdlerized, social-patriotic Stalinist type, for according to the dispatch "the new crop of German communists are convinced internationalists," which fact, it is pointed out, "may perhaps make cooperation with Moscow difficult."

This report is of the highest significance. It means not only that a decade of Nazi terror has failed utterly to extirpate the workers' revolutionary movement, but that the efforts of the Stalinists during the same period have likewise failed to uproot the ideas of socialist internationalism from the ranks of the vanguard.

The report goes on to state that the Gestapo has captured and executed some of the participants in this new revolutionary movement, but only "small fry." The movement, however, continues its activities through secret "cells" which "sabotage war industries and agitate among foreign workers."

Churchill Vote Reveals Growth Of Social Crisis

By Ralph Graham

Winston Churchill's government suffered its first parliamentary defeat last week when the House of Commons, by a vote of 117 to 116, passed an amendment to the government's Education Bill which provided equal pay for men and women teachers. Churchill's cabinet met and decided to make the issue one of "confidence" in the government by resubmitting it to the House, which then proceeded to adopt the bill minus the amendment by a vote of 425 to 23.

Taken in conjunction with other recent developments, particularly the coal miners' strike and the election of independently left-wing candidates, this parliamentary incident shows the extent to which Britain's artificial national unity is breaking down before the realities of the class struggle. At the same time, Churchill's demand for a vote of confidence upon a relatively minor domestic issue indicates the fear of the British capitalist class that the smallest breach in the structure of their rule may release the pent-up floodwaters of social discontent.

"CONFIDENCE" VOTE

Churchill made clear the importance of the issue when he threatened to resign unless Parliament reversed itself. The opposition, including the bulk of the Labor members, promptly tucked their tails between their legs and voted "confidence" in the imperialist government.

For more than four years the British working-class has been tied to the Tory war machine through the "political truce" between the Labor Party and the capitalist parties. The truce is expressed in the coalition government and the inter-party agreement whereby it is understood that the Labor Party does not contest parliamentary elections in constituencies held by the Tories, and vice versa.

As the war has dragged on, however, the conditions of the British workers have steadily worsened, while the exploiters, the British capitalists, have continued their accustomed lives of luxury with but the slightest of inconveniences. The political truce has meant, in effect, that the workers have had to submerge their own class interests to enable the imperialists to prosecute a war which has brought the workers nothing but misery and hardship.

THE AWAKENING

The workers have lately been indicating their realization of the true meaning of the political truce. First signs of the awakening were observed in a number of by-elections where they violated the truce and ran their own candidates in Tory-held constituencies, winning the elections hands-down. Then came the great coal strikes, in which the workers fought for improvement of their conditions despite the dire warnings of the capitalists and their government.

The Italian masses want bread, security and peace. They will win these objectives only in the struggle for the socialist revolution, against the Anglo-American imperialists, against the Mussolini and Monarchist cliques and against their Stalinist agents.

These developments were undoubtedly in the foreground of Churchill's mind when, on the issue of the Education Bill, he cracked down vigorously on the spineless opposition by his threat to resign. The fundamental question involved is the growing discontent and rebellion of the workers, their refusal to remain passive objects of exploitation. And the class war cannot be exorcized by a parliamentary vote of confidence in Churchill's government. The labor skates in the British Parliament may express their confidence in Churchill, but the feeling is not shared by the British workers. The continuing strikes

Seventeenth Anniversary Of Chinese Revolution Recalls Role Of Chiang Kai-Shek As Executioner Of The Masses

By Li Fu-jen

In these days when the magic wand of imperialist propaganda changes bloody dictators and reactionary monarchs into champions of democracy and liberty (provided, of course, they have entered the war camp of the self-styled "United Nations") it is well that we remind ourselves and the workers, of the real character of these men and the political regimes which they represent.

Chiang Kai-shek, butcher of the Chinese masses and head of a reactionary semi-colonial government, is a case in point. On April 12 it will be 17 years since Chiang, helped by the same imperialists who today have dressed him up in the garb of a "defender of democracy," staged a coup d'état at Shanghai which was the opening assault in a savage campaign that exterminated a popular revolution of the Chinese masses. The entire history of Chiang's regime is written in the blood and agony of the Chinese people.

Driven by the direst economic necessity, and inspired by the flaming example of Bolshevik Russia, the oppressed of China had risen to take over the land and the factories and to drive the imperialist freebooters from their country. Stalin proved to be the grave-digger of their revolution and Chiang—the executioner.

From the spring of 1925, which was marked by the great strike movements at Shanghai, Hongkong and Canton, the revolution had proceeded in an ever-ascending curve. Workers who had never known what it was to belong to an organization flowed into trade unions by the hundreds of thousands. Peasants formed village organizations. Class-conscious proletarians by the thousand entered the youthful Communist Party.

This elemental movement of the masses took on the aspect of a tidal wave. The most advanced revolutionary ideas were caught up by the awakened Chinese toilers, who manifested the utmost determination to carry them into action. The imperialists trembled for their vested interests and sent their warships and troops to the principal ports. The native exploiters, who hoped to use the masses for the purpose of extracting concessions from the imperialists, viewed with misgiving the process by which a movement which began as a campaign against foreign domination, took on more and more of a class character, with the masses directing their blows at both foreign and native exploiters.

Capitalist Class Leader

Chiang Kai-shek, leader of the native capitalist class, sought to vanquish the regional military chiefs who were the puppets and agents of the various imperialist powers, and unify the country under a national capitalist government.

To liquidate the regional militarists Chiang needed mass support. The masses, however, would rally only to a party with a radical program, or which they believed had one. They were following the Communist Party. It was therefore necessary to use the Communist Party. Through his own party, the Kuomintang, Chiang endeavored into a so-called "united front" agreement with the C. P.

On the direct instructions of the Comintern, dominated at that time by Stalin and Bukharin, the Third Conference of the Chinese Communist Party, in June, 1923, raised the slogan: "All work for the Kuomintang!" And its Manifesto proclaimed that "the Kuomintang should be the central force of the national revolution and should stand in the leading position."

This classic reformist dogma, which Lenin fought against in Russia, meant loss of the political and organizational independence of the C. P. and the subordination of the class interests of the toilers to the class interests of their exploiters and oppressors. The C. P., instead of becoming the revolutionary leader of the exploited people, became a miserable political appendage of the Chinese capitalist class. Never before had a party with a great revolutionary mission so shamefully abdicated its historic role.

Throughout the years 1925-27 the Chinese Communists acted as a brake upon the developing revolution. When peasants rose up to seize the land from reactionary landlords, the Communists restrained them. Otherwise, don't you see, the landlords would be antagonized and the "national united front" disrupted. When workers went on strike against Chinese capitalists, the Communists acted similarly, for the capitalists, like the landlords, were not to be antagonized.

Chiang Advances on Shanghai

In the summer of 1926 Chiang Kai-shek embarked on the great northward expedition from Canton to the Yangtze, subduing local militarists who would not acknowledge his leadership, making deals with those who did. To the accompaniment of this expedition, which had the effect of rousing more millions of the oppressed, the Chinese revolution moved toward its tragic climax.

On February 17, 1927, Chiang's forces had advanced to within easy reach of Shanghai, where they were expected to clash with the local militarist, Sun Chuan-fang. The workers of this great industrial

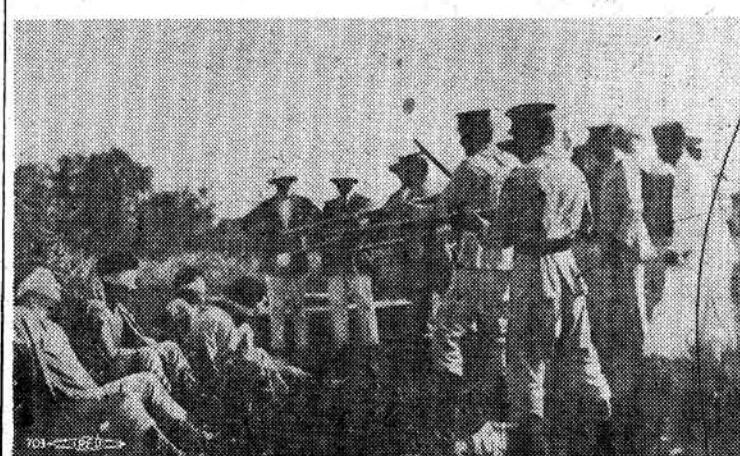

The scene above was typical of hundreds throughout Chinese cities in the bloody terror that followed Chiang Kai-shek's coup d'état. trial center greeted the approach of the nationalist troops with a general strike. Within 48 hours more than 350,000 workers were on the streets. The city was stopped dead. The slogans of this great political strike reflected unfortunately the class-collaborationist character of the C. P. program: "Support the Northern Expeditionary Army!", "Overthrow Sun Chuan-fang!", "Hail Chiang Kai-shek!"

Bound by their Moscow-dictated pact with Chiang, the Communists grew fearful of this great mass movement. They failed to give it leadership and facilitated the breaking of the strike by Sun Chuan-fang's police and armed gangsters. Many of the best workers-militants were captured and executed. The workers armed themselves and fought back against the police terror, and this defensive movement, rapidly passing over to the offensive, compelled the Communist Party leaders to make plans for an armed uprising. They had no intention however of establishing workers' power. They simply intended to crush Sun Chuan-fang—and turn Shanghai over to the "great liberator" Chiang Kai-shek.

The uprising took place on February 22 and was bloodily suppressed. Fighting in the streets continued until the 24th and then died out. Chiang had his troops halt some distance from Shanghai to enable the Shanghai garrison commander to carry out a bloodletting of the workers. Later he rewarded this butcher with the command of one of his armies.

Trained Worker's Militia

However, the events of February 19-24 were merely the prelude to a vastly greater attempt by the Shanghai workers to establish their own power. They had been defeated but not crushed. Their organizations were still intact. March 21 was set as the date for a new strike and insurrection. The Chinese Communists, young, inexperienced were completely disoriented by Stalin's policies and instructions. They were carried along however by the surging mass movement and found themselves in a position where, despite Stalin's orders, they were forced to lead the insurrection, even though half-heartedly. They still planned to turn Shanghai over to Chiang after the workers had captured it.

The military nucleus of the insurrection was a trained workers' militia of about 5,000 men divided into squads of twenty and thirty. For arms, at the beginning, they had only 150 Mauser pistols—less than one per squad. The others fought against the police and soldiers armed only with clubs, knives and axes. But—testimony to their magnificent will to win and their matchless courage and ingenuity—by the late afternoon of March 22 all of the city—except the foreign concessions—was in the hands of the revolutionary workers who had fought down and vanquished (where they did not win over) the police and soldiers of the other side. A white flag over the North Station signified the end of the last pocket of resistance to the triumphant workers. The sounds of rifle fire gave way to the crackle of fireworks and the shouts of workers celebrating their victory.

After it was all over, the First Division of Chiang's nationalist troops reached the city. Their commander Hsueh Yoh, despite contrary orders from Chiang, had been compelled by pressure of his own ranks to come to the help of the workers, but by the time the troops arrived, the workers, unaided, had done the job of sending Sun Chuan-fang into limbo.

Chiang himself reached Shanghai on March 26. His first caller was Hwang Ching-yung, gangster leader of the notorious secret society known as the Green Circle which was to play a leading role as executioner of the Shanghai proletariat. His next visitor was T. Patrick Givens, head of the political department of the imperialist police force of the Foreign Settlement, who presented the "anti-imperialist" Chiang with a pass for entering the foreign concession areas and accorded him the privilege of traveling therein with an armed guard. Chiang, for his part, assured Givens that he would "cooperate with the foreign police of Shanghai" and then plunged into conference with his aides and supporters to see how "law and order" could be reestablished.

While Chiang plotted against the workers, preparing to drown in blood the new power which they had organized and which in every respect was preserving order, the workers were being prepared by the Communist Party leaders to welcome Chiang as their liberator, as the leader of the national revolution against imperialism. Stalin had declared Chiang to be "a reliable ally"—one who "will not betray." And although the Chinese Communists, with good reason, had misgivings on this subject, they kept their counsel to themselves.

Conspiracy of Silence

These C. P. leaders were engaged in a conspiracy of silence—a conspiracy to conceal Chiang Kai-shek's counter-revolutionary role. Along the route of the northward march from Canton, Chiang had employed reactionary troops in a reign of terror against the peasants in the countryside and the workers in the towns, exterminating revolutionary militants by the thousands with brutal bestiality. Where elements of feudal reaction had been overthrown by the masses in advance of the arrival of Chiang's troops, Chiang restored these elements to power as his vassals—heedless of the fact that Stalin had assigned him the role of leading a national revolution which, among other things, was to liquidate these feudal elements.

The Communist Party leaders could not proclaim these facts, could not expose Chiang's reactionary role—because they were under constantly-reiterated orders from Moscow (which also knew the facts) not to break with Chiang and the Kuomintang, but on the contrary to do everything necessary, including crawling on their bellies before Chiang, to preserve the "national united front."

Trotsky demanded at that time that the Chinese C. P. break with the Kuomintang and assume complete political and organizational independence. That it lead the masses instead of restraining them. That it pursue its own independent program and prepare the workers for the nation-wide seizure of power. On April 3, 1927 Trotsky submitted for publication in the Soviet press an article embodying this program entitled "Class Relations in the Chinese Revolution." It was refused publication under Stalin's orders.

The workers of Shanghai, instead of being aroused to revolutionary vigilance against Chiang's capitalist counter-revolutionary stroke, were being lulled into a feeling of false security by their leaders. While their executioner stood at the very gates of their new citadel of power, the workers, kept in ignorance of Chiang's real role, were preparing to welcome Chiang—as their great liberator!

Chiang's First Division

The First Division of Chiang's army had arrived in Shanghai on March 22 under command of Hsueh Yoh. It was composed of seasoned soldiers deeply conscious of their bond with the revolutionary workers, which explains why they insisted that their commander take them to Shanghai to aid the workers' revolution. Chiang, within a week of his arrival in the city, ordered Hsueh Yoh to remove his troops. The young division commander, himself sympathetic to the workers' cause, appeared before the Central Committee of the C. P. and confided to them his knowledge that Chiang was preparing a counter-revolutionary stroke. He offered to defy Chiang and hold his troops in readiness to aid the workers in crushing any attempt at a coup d'état.

Demoralized by Moscow's conciliatory policy which called for communist Party leaders would not take responsibility for asking Hsueh Yoh to keep his troops in the city in defiance of Chiang. Instead they addressed a humble petition to Chiang asking that the First Division be kept in the city. Chiang's answer was a peremptory order to the young general to move his troops out at once. The troops, lacking any other directive, and having confidence in the judgment of the Communists, departed. Workers' Shanghai lost a precious ally.

From then on Chiang moved swiftly. Piecemeal attacks on the workers by reactionary troops which had replaced the First Division took place all over the city. Workers' pickets—the Chinese equivalent of the Russian Red Guard—were set upon in the streets by soldiers and gangsters. Raids took place on union headquarters. Even the city Kuomintang office, largely under Communist influence, was closed down. The workers were bewildered by these events and thought them due to some misunderstanding. For were they not told that Chiang Kai-shek was their true leader and liberator?

Chiang's Counter-revolution

The counter-revolutionary coup which was to smash the revolution opened on the morning of April 12 when attacks by troops, police and armed gangsters were launched simultaneously against the five proletarian districts of the city. The workers were caught unawares by the turn of events. Too late, their leaders issued a call for a general strike. More than 100,000 workers responded to the call and armed themselves to ward off the attacks of the counter-revolution. It was an unequal struggle whose tragic ending had been predetermined by the false and vacillating policy of the workers' leaders. The Communist Party leaders had done nothing to prepare for the counter-revolutionary stroke while the class enemy was making every possible preparation.

The workers' revolution was shattered and drowned in its own blood. The flower of the militant working-class was slain amid scenes of the wildest savagery. The Chinese bourgeoisie under Chiang's leadership displayed a relentless determination in pursuing its bloody task—a determination that had been conspicuously lacking in the Communist Party leadership which left the workers unprepared and virtually defenseless in face of their mortal foe. Working-class victims were numbered by the thousands. Both in the number of victims and the savage cruelty visited upon the vanquished, the defeated Chinese revolution ranks with the Paris Commune of 1871.

At Canton in December, 1927, the Communist organized an adventurous uprising on the declining wave of the revolution which had been decisively broken at Shanghai eight months earlier. More thousands of victims were added to the lists. Reaction in its most vicious forms stalked the land from one end to the other. Those who did not fall in the first attacks of the counter-revolution were in subsequent years hunted down by Chiang's police. If they escaped summary execution, it was only to die from incarceration in foul medieval dungeons. Almost an entire revolutionary generation was wiped out. Among them were not only members of the Communist

Despite the fearful bloodbath to which Chiang Kai-shek subjected them, China's oppressed masses rose to their feet again when Japan's imperialist armies marched into their country. Pictured here is a part of a crowd of 50,000 workers, students and small shopkeepers which gathered in Shanghai on Sept. 26, 1931 to protest the Japanese invasion of Manchuria and the treacherous policies of Chiang's government.

Party, victims of Stalin's monstrous policy of revolutionary betrayal, but many Trotskyists, faithful bearers of the banner of Lenin and Trotsky. Nor has Chiang's reactionary terror ended. It continues still. The prisons of Kuomintang China are crowded with workers, peasants, intellectuals whose only crime has been criticism of Chiang's bloody regime.

The crushing of the Chinese revolution meant a new lease on life for imperialism. It laid China open to attack by the Japanese imperialists and was no negligible factor in the preparation of the present world war. Chiang Kai-shek, the sinister agent of Chinese reaction, is being held up before the world as a "lover of liberty" both by the Allied imperialists and their allies in the Stalinist camp. But the false mantle of "democracy" cannot hide the infamous deeds of this Chinese Franco. The Chinese masses have not forgotten them. They are a part of history. Only the triumphant Chinese revolution can adequately avenge them.

The Negro Struggle

By Charles Jackson

The Role of the Stalinists

The American Communist Party in its early days was the most outspoken champion of the rights of the Negro people.

The members were called at that time "reckless agitators" and "provocateurs" by the reactionary Southern Bourbons because their militant program included a demand for complete racial equality. They were accused of attempting to stir up "insurrections" among the millions of disfranchised and oppressed Negroes in the South.

Many pioneer Negro Communists were beaten up and run out of town by gangs of Klansmen when they attempted to expound their program of emancipation of the working class and suppressed minorities; when they advocated militant methods of struggle by the Negro masses to fight racial segregation and discrimination. In Tennessee, Mississippi and other Southern states these fearless Communist militants were jailed by the ruling-class time and time again for utilizing their right of free speech.

Today, however, it is a known fact that the Communist party (in blind obedience to Stalin), has actually completely dropped the fight for Negro equality here in America.

This about-face switch in the party policy has been cleverly camouflaged, however, in an attempt to conceal this betrayal from the Negro rank and file party members.

Worse still, even though the Negro struggle has been forsaken, attempts are still made to enmesh and befuddle the political freshmen among Negro militants so that they may be sold down the river, all on the grounds of "patriotism" to the American and British imperialists who hold hundreds of millions of our dark-skinned brothers in starving subjection throughout the world.

The average Negro worker or soldier is naturally resentful these days of the kind of treatment he is receiving in this "democracy." He has found out through experience that he cannot gain equality under Capitalism.

He looks with hope and faith to the Communists for salvation, imagining that they are naturally in the forefront in any fight for the underdog. Such is no longer the case.

The Negro Intellectuals are being used to do the dirty work in this betrayal. For example, let us examine some of the contradictory spewings of Ben Davis, Jr., Negro councilman of New York City and member of the Stalinist party. In a recent article in New Masses he states: "The Communists identify themselves with the deep indignation of the Negro masses . . . supporting the demands of these masses for the elimination of Jim-Crow." This is the juicy bait intended to hook the unsuspecting Negro.

In the same article, the betrayal is exposed. It reads: "Now the Communists have, however, sharply dissociated themselves from reckless methods (Davis is speaking here of the March on Washington Movement) . . . and we oppose these methods as harmful to the Negro . . ."

How can this politically anemic hypocrite "dissociate" himself from "reckless" methods and yet even pretend to "support the demands of the masses"? And speaking of recklessness, the unexampled methods of struggle that had to be used by the Russian masses to free themselves from autocratic tyranny symbolize the heritage of real Com-

SOURCES OF STRENGTH WHICH SUSTAIN MARXIST MOVEMENT

Our party is built on correct ideas and therefore is indestructible. But, in addition to that, I believe there is in this party of ours an intangible power which reinforces the power of its ideas. That is the spirit of the party—it's comradeship, its solidarity. You know the word "comrade" has been so long abused and so badly defiled by self-seekers and pretenders that honest people sometimes shrink from using the word any more. But in the movement that has been created under the inspiration of Trotsky, with his example always before us, the word "comrade" has acquired a new, fresh meaning that animates the members of our movement, not only in their political work in the class struggle, but also in their daily lives and in their associations with each other. It is not any more, not with us, a formal and conventional word, but

Sign This Petition to Free the 18 Free The 18 Minneapolis Prisoners

FIRST TO BE CONVICTED UNDER THE SMITH "GAG" ACT FOR THEIR IDEAS AND UNION ACTIVITIES

PRESIDENT FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT
WHITE HOUSE, WASHINGTON, D. C.

The undersigned respectfully petition you to grant unconditional pardon and immediate release to the 18 members of Minneapolis Truckdrivers Local 544-CIO and of the Socialist Workers Party now serving twelve and sixteen month prison sentences.

These trade-union and socialist leaders have been persecuted solely because of their opinions and their activities on behalf of labor. The U.S. Supreme Court in an unprecedented action refused to review their case even though the infamous Smith "Gag" Act under which they have been convicted clearly violates the constitutional rights of free speech and free press.

We believe that the unjust imprisonment of the 18 provides a dangerous precedent that is a threat to the democratic liberties of the American people.

We therefore urge you to uphold the Bill of Rights by pardoning the 18 Minneapolis prisoners.

voice to the numerous protests by prominent national Negro organizations, in a resolution to the President. In addition, Mr. Joseph James, Committee Chairman, wrote a personal letter to President Roosevelt, declaring:

"As a Negro I have long been interested in the minorities problem in this country. The treatment accorded one minority is likely to be accorded to others. A right most important to every minority group is the right of its members to express themselves for the purpose of bettering their conditions. When that right is denied, we see a legal weapon aimed against us. . . . The Minneapolis convictions are out of line with every principle which has led minorities to support this administration."

George Novack, National CRDC Secretary has visited two more cities in his national tour to secure support for the CRDC campaign in the Minneapolis Labor Case. From Cleveland, Mr. Novack reported on March 30:

"Everyone was pleased with the attendance and results of the meeting held by the Local Committee at the Hotel Allerton, on Sunday night. Auto workers, steel workers, Negro workers attended the meeting. I spoke after John M. Holly, President of the Future Outlook League. This is the leading Negro organization in Cleveland, numbering, according to Mr. Holly, 23,000 members. It is an organization dedicated to the defense of the Negro economic and social rights and has branches in a number of other cities. Holly, who has himself been put in jail because of his fight for equal rights for his people, pledged the complete support of this organization to our Committee and its work. He gave us permission to visit any of his branches throughout Ohio."

From Toledo, Mr. Novack reported: "The Toledo public meeting on Thursday night was equally encouraging, held in the new headquarters of the Toledo CRDC in the Roi Davis Bldg. Newly-painted, newly-furnished, centrally located, it was a very attractive meeting place. There were mostly auto workers and railroad workers—in fact all were one or the other. They listened attentively, asked questions, bought literature to distribute among their friends, and contributed to the collection that night."

plan into effect. Those classified as 4-F, unqualified for any military duty, as well as those in Class 1 A-L, fit only for limited service, will be permitted "to remain in civilian life as long as they hold jobs deemed important by Selective Service," but will be subject to induction, "if they leave such jobs without permission of their draft boards." Just a modified version of Roosevelt's forced labor proposal.

LABOR BUREAUCRATS

The most disturbing aspect of the campaign to put over a "modified version" of the forced labor bill is the reported conversion of the labor bureaucrats to the support of such a measure. The N. Y. Herald-Tribune reports on March 24 that "top labor leaders, representatives of the War and Navy Departments and proponents of the Austin-Wadsworth national service bill were disclosed to have held last Thursday the first of a series of talks as to possible modification of the proposed act to make it acceptable to those who wholly oppose it." The same source reported the following day the announcement by Senator Warren R. Austin, co-author of the Austin-Wadsworth national service act, "that the second of a series of conferences was held today to modify the Austin-Wadsworth national service bill and make it more acceptable. He said William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, was present, and expressed belief that labor is now in favor of some of the objectives of his bill."

Why are the "top labor leaders" meeting in secret session with the deadly enemies of the union movement and what "objectives" of the forced labor draft are they now in favor of? The union members have a right to know what bitter stew their "leaders" are now cooking up! Why have these so-called leaders remained silent in the face of the campaign to put across the "modified version" of labor draft? It is already clear that the 4-F plan establishes a compulsory labor system designed to freeze workers to jobs selected for them by Roosevelt's agents. The only "modification" so far discernible is that, for the present, women are not included in the draft. The so-called 4-F is significant that a goodly portion of these CIO Democrats are really prominent Stalinists, advocates of piece-work speedup, strike-breaking and complete submission to the war machine. The old parties welcome such "labor representation," hoping it will help corral the labor vote. It is doubtful, however, that many Michigan workers will be deceived again.

The Genesee County Committee at Flint is headed by Chairman, Francis R. Palmer; vice chairman, Bert Boone, and secretary, Andrew Michelson, all of Chevrolet Local 659, UAW-CIO, of which Boone is president. Boone headed a "labor party" slate that swept all the Chevrolet local offices but one in the February-March elections.

PROFITS FIRST

The Army accepted 250 defective engines from the Wright Aeronautical Corporation despite their previous rejection by civilian Army inspectors, it was revealed on April 4 at a court-martial of three Army Air Force officers on charges of neglect and conspiracy. William J. Ratchford, one of the inspectors, testified, "The company did not repair them and we did not accept them. Then the company said it could not meet its monthly quota and they were all accepted in that condition."

APRIL 7, 1934

LUXEMBURG — Expelled from Holland by the Dutch government, representatives of independent proletarian youth organizations reassembled in Luxembourg to discuss the lessons of the German events, of the crisis in the international labor movement and its youth sections. Delegates from Holland, Belgium, France, Sweden, Czechoslovakia, Switzerland, Roumania, Greece, Spain, Australia and the U.S. participated; four of the representatives from Germany had been deported by Holland to Hitler Germany, and no word of their fate had been received.

The conference issued a call for the following campaign: Relentless struggle against Fascism; Against war, chauvinism and military propaganda, and the militarization of the youth; For the defense of democratic rights of the proletariat; For shorter working hours with no cut in pay; Against forced labor; For the defense of the USSR as a workers' State.

Delegates present represented the following groups: Union of Young Socialists, Holland; Revolutionary Youth Union, Holland; Young Socialist Union, Germany; Young Workers Union, Norway; Youth Group of Communist League of Struggle, U. S.; International Communist League Youth (Trotskyist), Germany, France, Belgium, U. S. A., Canada, Switzerland, Spain, Greece, Czechoslovakia, and Australia; Mot Tag Group, Norway; Federation of Young Communists, Sweden; Federation of Young Socialists, Roumania; and Unitary Federation of Young Workers, France.

NEW YORK — Trotskyist leaders participated in the Anti-Fascist Committee formed to aid Anthony Bellussi, militant Italian trade-unionist. The Militant reported Bellussi had "won the right of voluntary departure from the United States . . . sentenced to deportation to Fascist Italy, Bellussi is now enabled to escape from the clutches of the Mussolini regime."

NEW YORK — The second general strike of the New York taxi drivers was defeated, The Militant demonstrated, by the combined forces of the companies who imported gangsters from Chicago to supplement the home supply, the police who drove scab cars and rode in them to provoke attacks by pickets, the yellow press which tried to frame up bombings on the union, the Mayor and his mediators, the NRA doves of peace . . . the Socialist party which sabotaged the strike and went in for a vicious red-baiting campaign in the union, and (by) the mis-takes of the leadership."

The ALP Primary

The primary fight is over in New York's American Labor Party. The Stalinist-Hillman bloc won by a big majority and proceeded to take over the state machine. The Dubinsky-Social Democratic faction has made good its threat to walk out of the ALP.

Thus the curtain has been drawn on a performance which by its sheer obscenity must have revolted every class-conscious worker, every honest unionist, every sincere labor progressive. The primary fight between the two factions hit a new low in the methods of political warfare.

The issues agitating the American workers were completely ignored. Not a word was so much as whispered by either side about Roosevelt's proposed labor draft, about the wage freeze, about the attempt of the army brass hats to incite the military forces against the workers, about the war profiteering, and soaring prices. None of these problems interested Browder, Hillman, Dubinsky or Counts. The campaign was fought over one single question: Who would make the best lackey for Roosevelt?

Dubinsky, Rose, Counts, and Co. fought for this "honor" on the basis of greater seniority. Hillman and the Stalinists, on the other hand claimed greater zeal. For a worker striving to create a genuine labor party independent of the capitalist parties there was no choice between the two contending cliques inside the ALP.

The Militant took the only correct position when it advised workers that no progressive purpose would be served by the victory of one or the other faction, that the task for class-conscious workers therefore was to lay the "foundation for the reorganization of the ALP into a genuine labor party... not by backing one bureaucratic clique against the other, but by solid educational and organizational ground work in the trade union locals and the ALP clubs."

The Militant has consistently supported the ALP in every electoral contest in which it nominated its own candidates separate and apart from the candidates of the capitalist parties. Thereby we served the needs and the aspirations of the workers for an independent party of labor.

The primary fight between the two cliques inside the ALP was not in the least concerned with the need for independent labor political action. Both cliques campaigned in the primaries on a program of unconditional support of Roosevelt for a fourth term. As far as these clique leaders are concerned, the ALP was going to continue its subservience to the capitalist parties and to be tied to Roosevelt's apron strings.

The task of class-conscious workers in the primary campaign was to raise the banner of independent political action in the unions and the ALP clubs against both cliques in the ALP. This continues to be the task today after the primaries. They will proceed with the solid spade work which is the necessary precondition for the building of a new militant leadership in the New York City trade union movement and for the building of a genuine labor party.

Such perspectives never appeal to opportunists in the labor movement: they do not promise any miraculous results overnight. They involve too much programmatic intransigence; too much hard, prolonged, sustained and systematic Jimmy Higgins work.

By now, it has become a commonplace in the labor movement for individuals, outraged by the crimes of Stalinism, to clique up with anybody, any force, any faction, any reactionary, under any program, for the ostensible purpose of fighting Stalinism. In the ranks of the Dubinsky-Social Democratic faction are to be found not a few ex-radicals and renegades who have so completely lost their political bearings and integrity that they stand ready to join even with red baiters under a red baiting program provided it is against the Stalinists. In practice, of course, these "anti-Stalinists" only furnish grist to the Stalinist mill. They can't fight the Stalinists by counterposing to the Stalinist fink program a militant program of labor action. They espouse the same fink program themselves! So, they fight the Stalinists by bureaucratic expulsions, by exclusions, by trying to outdo and out-shout them in their submission to reaction. All they accomplish is to antagonize thousands of workers by their bureaucratic high handedness and build up support for the Stalinists.

We witnessed this phenomenon in 1938 in the faction fight of the auto union. Homer Martin, then President of the UAW, by his red baiting, his bureaucratic high handedness only built up Stalinist strength. At that time, a group of petty bourgeois opportunists, the late unlamented Lovestoneites, clique up with Homer Martin and excused everything on the grounds of the "Stalinist menace." They accomplished little more than to disgrace themselves. We witnessed an equally disgraceful performance today on the part of a group of petty bourgeois opportunists—ex-Trotzkists, who abdicated their support of the Dubinsky-Social Democratic clique on the grounds of the "lesser evil."

But the struggle for a genuine independent labor party in New York goes on. The growing militant movement, spearheaded by the unionists of the eastern auto and aircraft plants, taking inspiration from the accomplishments of their fellow workers in Michigan, will push for the building of a genuine labor party in New York. They will do this in struggle not only against the Stalinists and Hillmans, but the Dubinsky-Social Democratic crew as well. They will do it by outlining a militant program of independent labor action and launching a principled and hard-hitting fight for this program.

3,000 New Readers

The campaign for 3,000 new regular readers of The Militant is now under way. For the period up to June 30, readers of the paper are offered a special introductory subscription to the enlarged six-page Militant for 25 cents for 13 issues. This offer is made possible, first, because of the magnificent response of our comrades and sympathizers to the $15,000-15th Anniversary Fund Campaign. Secondly, by the restoration of our second-class mailing privileges, regained after a vigorous fight for the democratic rights of the workers' press.

One of the most important tasks of The Militant in the days ahead is to penetrate the fog of silence with which the capitalist press has attempted to envelop the Minneapolis case. The Minneapolis case represents far more than an injustice to 18 leaders of the Socialist Workers Party and Truck Drivers Local 544-CIO, who have been railroaded to prison for speaking out against exploitation and tyranny, against capitalist oppression and war. It represents more than the violation of the Bill of Rights. The Minneapolis case represents in this war what the Debs' imprisonment represented in the first world war. It is the spearhead of the campaign of the plutocrats, the reactionaries, to house-break and terrorize the labor movement, to smash its living standards, to destroy its democratic rights, to Prussianize America and to regiment its people.

The Militant has a tremendous task to perform. It must bring the news and significance of this case into thousands of workers' homes. The ideas for which the 18 have been railroaded to prison are the ideas of Socialism. These ideas, this program, represent the only hope for suffering humanity.

The campaign for 3,000 new subscribers to The Militant constitutes a task of first class political importance. Of course, it helps strengthen our press and extend its influence. It spreads the message of revolutionary Socialism. This is important enough. But even further, the subscription campaign represents a campaign to smash the conspiracy of silence of the capitalist press, to bring home the true significance of the Minneapolis case to ever-wider circles of workers and thereby to organize the struggle of labor against the conspiracy of Big Business to silence all opposition to its dastardly rule, to its plots to throttle the unions and to totalitarianize America.

It is with this understanding and on behalf of these great aims that we call upon all of our friends and sympathizers to put their shoulder to the wheel and put over the subscription campaign for 3,000 new Militant readers.

Steel Convention

Editor:

In the coming CIO Steel Convention of May 9, President Murray will be forced to dodge every important problem. He will however, have to attack the War Labor Board for its anti-labor position. He will have to say a word for the soldiers. Murray is right in the middle, between a rebellious labor movement on his left and his "friends" in Washington on his right.

There is an opportunity right now, for all local unions to send many resolutions of a militant and progressive nature to the convention. Locals can get consideration for very timely resolutions and action if enough of them send in resolutions of the same content, for in this case even the hand-picked resolutions committee cannot evade the pressure. Here are my suggestions: resolution No. 1: Labor members resign from the pro-employer War Labor Board immediately. No. 2: Scrap the No-Strike Policy. No. 3: Encourage the building of strong shop steward committees in every plant. No. 4: Incorporate the No-Strike repudiation and the shop steward systems into the new steel contracts. No. 5: Emphasize the importance of Guaranteed Annual Pay, which Murray is conveniently forgetting. No. 6: Carry out in practice the official policy of No Discrimination against Negroes and Women. No. 7: Adopt the program of a constantly rising wage to meet the rising cost of living—the "escalator clause." No. 8: For the organization of grievance committees in the armed forces. No. 9: A union scale of wages for the armed forces. No. 10: Organization of soldier-affiliated organizations by the CIO, for returning soldiers. No. 11: Changing the CIO Political Action Committee into a committee to organize an Independent Labor Party. No. 12: Officers' Training of Workers under trade union control, to eliminate the reactionary power of the brass hats. No. 13: No confidence in government agencies and boards—reliance only on union strength. No. 14: Rank-and-file election of union organizers and representatives. No. 15: Preparation for a nation-wide steel strike to win the proposed demands.

It is difficult to arrange these in order of importance because especially in war-time, all progressive demands are of one pattern. The entire basis of these suggestions, (to which many others can be added) is that the

Negro Struggle

Editor:

I would like to present some personal criticism of the "Negro Struggle" column of March 18, 1944, entitled "The Preacher Takes a Back Seat." The idea that we have to take the religious question and discuss in our press in the manner set forth in the article, brings us to the conclusion that we must make atheists of people before they can become revolutionaries or sympathetic to our party and its program.

The Negro people in St. Paul by their actions have proven this is not true. I am sure that many of them who are friendly to us, would resent this article. They probably wouldn't say anything to us about it but I am sure it wouldn't help the situation any.

I am a long time member of the St. Paul branch of the N.A.A.C.P. and find that there is a real cross section of religious and non-religious people here, conservative and radical preachers, and all the things that you might find in a white neighborhood. To treat the question as purely a Negro question is, in my opinion, a mistake. When there are so many questions in relation to the Negro race which can be and have been treated in this column, I see no reason why we should discuss the question of religion. We don't have to make an issue of it in this country in the same manner that Lenin had to treat it in backward Czarist Russia. I think the primary purpose of this column should be to say what we are for. I am sure that the editors of this column would not be in favor of repudiating any help and assistance that we might get from militant Negro preachers.

J. P.
St. Paul, Minn.

J. W. and C. P.

It is difficult to arrange these in order of importance because especially in war-time, all progressive demands are of one pattern. The entire basis of these suggestions, (to which many others can be added) is that the distant when the separate movements in these countries will coalesce into a single, united and overwhelming upsurge of the masses which will smash the Nazi tyranny and project all Europe along the path of the socialist revolution.

HUNGARY

In a recent statement Secretary of State Cordell Hull urged the people of Hungary to rise against the Nazis. He declared that "only by firm resistance to the hated invader can Hungary, the first of the Axis satellites to feel the Nazi whip, hope to regain the respect and friendship of free nations and demonstrate its right to independence."

Considered in the light of what has happened in Italy, this appeal is grotesque in the extreme. The Italian people rose against Mussolini and the Fascists many, many months ago. But this does not appear to have qualified them for the "respect and friendship" of the American imperialists for whom Hull speaks. In the southern part of Italy, controlled by the Allied armies, the Italians have been given little freedom and no independence. They are not permitted to choose their own government. In fact, in the teeth of the opposition of the overwhelming mass of the people, the Allies are propping up and foisting on the country the hated rule of Badoglio and his king, who only yesterday adorned the Fascist regime of Mussolini.

Preparations have been completed for a repeat of the Italian performance in France, as evidenced all too clearly by Hull's refusal to give sole recognition to de Gaulle and the instructions to Eisenhower to deal with whatever authorities he deems fit when his armies land on French soil. It will be the same story if and

Returning Soldiers

Editor:

What is to be done about the returning soldiers? This problem is already becoming acute as thousands of workers are being released from the armed forces. And with the certainty of unemployment after the war, are the soldiers and civilian workers going to fight for their rights side by side, rather than as two artificially separated social forces? Are the soldiers going to be organized into a militant group affiliated with the labor movement; or will they be scattered into hundreds of frantic bodies with conflicting programs that can bring only frustration and despair; or will the capitalists deceive them into one large anti-union Storm-Troopers Legion? The CIO and perhaps sections of the other large unions are showing concern for this problem—and that is good. But what is the solution, if fascist blackshirts are to be avoided?

The American Legion has definite plans to corral every soldier, sailor and marine into their super-patriotic, 100% capitalistic order. They are facing the problem with a vigor and intelligence which puts the labor leaders to shame. The American Legion is certainly a true forerunner of a fascist movement. What could be better to control ten million misled and hungry men to set at the throats of thirteen million union workers?

And within the armed forces, Murray and Green at last discover the anti-labor policies of the brass hats—union literature is frowned upon, anti-labor propaganda is dished out, and in general commissioned officers are exactly parallel to superintendents in the plant—and they don't love unions!

But with all the protests of the labor "leaders" to the army officials, the labor movement has proposed very little, at the top, to actually solve this problem.

Recently the Ohio State CIO Convention passed a resolution presented by several Youngstown delegates, that the CIO organize the soldiers into affiliates of the CIO. Such a resolution should be forced to the top of the agenda of every CIO, AFL and Brotherhood meeting all over the nation.

And the unions must go further: they must fight for the democratic rights of the men in the armed forces.

In the "fight for democracy," would not a little fighting for democratization in the army be in place?

J. W. and C. P.

The Negro people in St. Paul by their actions have proven this is not true. I am sure that many of them who are friendly to us, would resent this article. They probably wouldn't say anything to us about it but I am sure it wouldn't help the situation any.

Incidentally, since when does any nation have to "demonstrate its right" to independence? Is this not supposed to be guaranteed, unconditionally, by the Atlantic Charter?

COLOMBIA

What the Associated Press described as a "paralyzing general strike" in Cali, fourth largest city of the Central American state of Colombia, came to an end on March 30 when the united action of the workers compelled the City Council to expropriate the property of the American-owned Compania Colombiana de Electricidad, a subsidiary of Electric Bond and Share which provides Cali with its electric power.

The company, in line with the profiteering practices of the monopolistic power corporations in this country, had been gouging the people unmercifully through excessive rates, which it stubbornly refused to reduce. The workers, not only in the power plant, but in every other enterprise as well, brought the matter to a head by a strike which stopped the city dead. The City Council, unable to vary the terms of the company's franchise, was forced to expropriate the entire property. This action shows what organized labor can do when it is united, militant and determined.

The UMW paper points out that the money spent for the lying advertisements of the coal operators "is dug out of the ground by the coal miners." It also points out that these advertisements aren't intended merely for public "good will". The operators are out to repeal the protective labor laws on the statute books."

The government permitted the operators steep price rises before any wage increases were granted. The miners were forced to strike four times for a meager raise. Now the operators are scheming to grind even greater profits out of the workers by knifing even the few existing legal protective measures won by decades of labor struggle.
