YOUNG COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL SESSIONS OPEN IN RED MOSCOW

Y. C. I. Grew in Last Period

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R. (By mail).—The VI Enlarged Executive of the Young Communist International was opened by Comrade Gyptner at 7:30 p. m. on November 12, 1926, in the Red Hall of the Comintern. There were present 26 members of the Executive, 23 representatives of various national organizations and 5 representatives of the Comintern.

Comrade Gyptner pointed out, in his opening speech, that the fact that the Y. C. I. Enlarged Executive was held before the similar session of the Communist International signified no estrangement between the two bodies. On the contrary, it signified a desire on the part of the Y. C. I. to participate even more closely in the work of the C. I. and to discuss the questions facing the Enlarged Executive of the Comintern in its own circles in advance. The closest co-operation between the C. I. and the Y. C. I. signified the last period of activity.

Our session will have to take a stand on the questions of tactics that have been recently discussed in the Comintern and in a number of parties. The Y. C. I.'s of a number of countries have unanimously taken a position in line with the C. P. S. U. and the C. I. Hence there is no question that this body will take a similar position.

Y. C. I. Grows.

The last period has been a period of growth for the Y. C. I. The greatest growth was in China, in England, and in the Soviet Union, the three chief columns of the world revolution. This shows the real connection of the Y. C. I. with the struggles of real life; this shows that the Y. C. I. has become a real revolutionary fighting organization.

Here today as for the last few years the questions of practical work will stand in the foreground. Particularly the questions of reorganization of our leagues and the questions of opponents will require our attention.

The struggles of the Y. C. I. has again taken its toll of martyrs. We have with us the representative of the Bulgarian League who has been sentenced to death. This is Comrade Riso Rossen whom I greet in the name of the entire Enlarged Executive. (Lively applause.) I also greet Comrade Rust, the Secretary of the English League who has just been released from jail—as well as the dozens of English comrades who have fallen into the hands of the bourgeoisie. We also call to mind the new waves of the White Terror in Bulgaria and Italy, in Finland and in Poland and in France. We cannot recall all the victims by name but I request the delegates to arise in honor of these comrades. All the sacrifices will serve to still further consolidate the ranks of the Y. C. I. (Applause).

Comrade Auer (Germany) proposes in the name of the German and the Russian delegations the following presidium: Lominadze, Schatzkin, Schuller, Gyptner, Longo, Chaplin, Blenkle, Barbe, Hrsel, Rust, Boris, Hoglund, a Chinese comrade, and Zam.

This proposition was unanimously adopted.

Krassin Is Dead

LEONID KRASSIN is dead. The famous Soviet diplomat passed away on Tuesday, Nov. 23rd in London, because of pernicious anaemia. The death of Comrade Krassin marks the passing of one of the leaders of the school of diplomacy that came into existence with the Russian revolution and that was founded by Lenin.

Leonid Krassin was born in the Ural region of Russia in 1870. His father was a commoner and he was educated at the university. He graduated as a technical engineer. He joined the Social Democratic Party of Russia in 1891 and was a follower of Lenin when the Bolsheviks split from the Mensheviks in 1903. In 1907 he was a delegate to the congress held in London. He played an important part in the revolution of 1917 and accompanied Trotsky to Brest-Litovsk during the peace negotiations. He was food commissar for the Red Army during the days of the counter-revolution and later became commissar of foreign trade. He was a member of the Central Committee of the Union of Soviet Republics. During 1925 he was Soviet ambassador to France. Early in 1926 he was transferred to London.

Pat Toohey, recently reinstated into the U. M. W. A. spoke in Pittston, Pa., at a mass meeting arranged by the "Brophy for president" committee. He spoke in detail of the cut in wages suffered by the miners of the Hudson Coal Company which may result in a general strike of the 22,000 miners of this company.

YOUNG MINERS SEE HUDSON CO. MOVE TO CUT WAGES AND SMASH THE UNION

Part of Operators Offensive

By ART SHIELDS, Federated Press.

SCRANTON, Pa.—(FP)—Hudson Coal Co., whose breakers spot the northern anthracite field for many miles, is threatened with a strike of its 22,000 employees. The general grievance committee of the 22 local unions involved says that unless the management remedies one of the many grievances that have been hanging fire it will call a strike the latter half of November.

Youth Candidates in Miners' Union Support Progress

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—In the youth section of The Coal Miner here there is printed the following interesting statements of young coal miners who are running for office on the progressive slate in the United Mine Worker's elections:

SESESKY FOR DISTRICT VICE-PRESIDENT

Coal Cneter, Pa.—I, the undersigned, am a candidate for vice-president of District 5, U. M. W. of A., and I feel it necessary that I submit a statement to the press telling why I am running.

I am wholeheartedly in support of the program of John Brophy, candidate for international president of the U. M. W. of A., and when I am elected I will do my best to "Save the Union," also I am for anybody else who has adopted the platform above mentioned.

First, when I am elected I will endeavor to put an end to the discrimination against the youth in the mines.

The youth's mind is quick, and willing, the young men are those who will carry on a militant fight. The older members of the union should not look upon the young miner as a mere child. They should recognize him as a brother in the union. The youth should be given preference in the union positions, in order to fit him for future work.

In the mines at present the young are discriminated against and exploited more than anybody else, with the possible exception of the very old men. In our contract the youth is not covered at all. In some mines, when they hire a youth who is under age the company makes him sign a paper giving up all right to compensation. The young fellow works with his father or some older man for a while, and then it put by himself, and generally gets the worst places. No youth should work on night shift. Every miners' son should have a chance to go to school. As it is, there is not a chance for much schooling for many young miners, because they have to work too hard. The youth gets more than his fair share of accidents. Going to and from work we see many men who are crippled from injuries, from rheumatism, or some other vocational disease. These should be compensated for vocational injury and disease.—JOHN SESESKY.

JOHN TUMILTY FOR AUDITOR.

I am at the present time a candidate for sub-district auditor of Sub-District No. 4, District 12, U. M. W. of A. I am going in to win, for I think that

Workers' Sports

Strike Still On in Sports Goods Factory

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—The strike in the factory that makes the "Louisville Slugger" bats is still on. The trade union involved has issued the following publicity on the affair:

Remember the "Louisville Slugger," a baseball bat, golf clubs, and other sporting goods made by the Hillerich & Bradsby Company, of Louisville, Ky., a firm that is not fair to our organization.

Our local unions have been circumscribed from time to time and articles appearing in the Journal, calling to the attention of our members that Local Union 666, of Louisville, Ky.,

have been on strike at this factory since April 2 of this year, caused by the company discriminating against organized labor, discharging members of our organization because they belonged to our union, refusing to hire union men or pay the union scale of wages.

The Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled in Detroit on October 1, this year, passed a resolution placing this firm on the unfair list. The American Federation of Labor in convention assembled the second week in October, passed a resolution by unanimous vote declaring this firm unfair and have authorized their executive council to render every assistance possible to adjust this strike or to give the matter further publicity.

Bonus Speeds Youth in Radio Plant

By a Young Worker Correspondent.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Freed-Eiseman Radio Company plant in East New York is representative of all the evils that the bosses in the radio industry practice. Here we find the workers getting on the average of from $18 to $20 a week. In order to keep the workers satisfied they have installed a bonus system whereby they keep the worker at top speed for an imaginary bonus, to be paid if a certain amount of sets are made and passed.

Bonus Speed-Up Scheme.

Usually this ranges itself over 100 sets at about 2 cents for each set after this mark. It is practically impossible to make 100 sets, yet the bosses not only expect but demand that the fellows and girls make over this amount. This results in many minor and major injuries to the hands and person of the worker going at top speed.

They require that the fellows and girls work nine hours a day, yet when it comes to giving time for lunch there is but a little over a half hour.

Workers are crammed into bench space ten and twelve to a bench that can at the most only accommodate four or five. Here they are in constant danger from the sets piled in front and back of them. No flue or ventilating system is provided to carry off the poisonous gases which result from the molten lead and flux. The workers breathe this fragrant aroma and consequently suffer from many lung irritations and troubles.

Workers Must Organize.

Yet, despite the many other miserable unsanitary and unfair conditions, the workers are slaving away at top speed for the bonus, which is the biggest fake imaginable, since it does not amount to a raise, nor is it actually attainable. Not only this, but it serves to speed up the entire production to a point where the bosses of the Freed-Eiseman Radio Company can lay off the workers many months ahead of the time that they ordinarily would if the sets were being produced on a normal basis of speed.

This condition must stop at once. The workers of the Freed-Eiseman Radio Company must organize themselves into a union for their just demands in working conditions and rate.

We of the Young Workers' League will back and help to carry to a successful finish such an attempt on the part of the workers to organize into a

Some League Questions

By I. RIJAK.

COMRADE DARCY, in his article in the last number of the Young Worker, touched on a very important and immediate question of our league. In general these analysis are correct, but they need more clarification.

"Pessimism."

First of all, does pessimism exist in the Young Workers' League? This question must be answered categorically: In general there is not pessimism but such a tendency exists. What are the causes for such a tendency? Some comrades are inclined to think the reorganization is one of the reasons. To those comrades we answer that the reorganization is not the basis for pessimism, but is a bolshevik step forward. Much has been gained thru the new orientation of our league: (1) Today the Y. W. L. is nearer and more connected with the working youth than previously. (2) The Y. W. L. at the present time, more than ever before, knows and the understands the life of the working youth of America. (3) The Y. W. L. is more than ever before participating in external mass activity. (4) The Y. W. L. is not only living with the enthusiasm of the achievements of our sections in Europe, but participate and to a certain extent lead the class struggle in the United States. For example, the Passaic strike, furriers' strike, paper box strike, the campaign for the unionization of the youth, etc. The above stated facts convinces every comrade that the reorganization is a bolshevik method and a bridge between the Y. W. L. and the working youth.

Some comrades are pessimistic because we are not in a directly revolutionary situation. This is certainly not an excuse for pessimism.

In such a period revolutionists must do everything in their power to build the party and the league, to set the masses into motion and to lead the workers. Lenin always said: "A revolutionist is not one who comes into the party in the revolutionary period, but the one who builds and prepares the party for coming revolutionary struggles."

The fact of the matter is that our party is making progress more than ever before. Only for the last few years our party has become an influential factor in the labor movement of America. Our party and the left wing as a whole proved that we at the present time are ready to lead certain sections of the working class. For example, leadership of various strikes, the campaign for the protection of foreign-born, the campaign for organizing the unorganized, the forty-hour movement, movement for labor party, etc. And today more than ever before there is no room for pessimism in the Communist movement.

Reorganization.

The Young Workers' League will for some time to come be in the period of reorganization and in the period of readjustment, due to the fact that the social composition is not yet a good one and the number of members are small and insignificant, which makes it impossible to reorganize immediately on the basis of shop nuclei. This, of course, does not mean that an error was made by commencing to reorganize our league, as some comrades express themselves. The reorganization is not only a change in the construction of our league, but it is an ideological and organizational transformation from isolation to external mass work.

Concentration groups are temporary units and the more nuclei are organized the sooner will concentration groups go out of existence. At the present moment many concentration groups for one or another reason (mainly because of bad social composition) are dead. Such units are not needed in a Communist organization and we shall not be afraid to eliminate them, combine them with living units, organize street nuclei and even in exceptional cases to permit territorial branches, but always to carry in mind the correct prospective; that is the organization of shop nuclei is absolutely necessary, and at the same time make efforts to organize them.

The stage in which the league is now situated, with our units not stable and very frequently the comrades changing units, thus continuously transferring cannot be avoided during this period, but should not make a bad reflection on the comrades. Do not get excited, do not kick, but adapt yourself to the new unit and carry on your work.

Everyday Work.

When speaking of reorganization it is impossible to omit the question of our everyday activity. The present structure of our league is based on activity. The entire life of the league is based on the constructive activity of each and every member. The slogan of the league today is "Build the League." That means to be active every day and not an "evening or Sunday" Communist. Every comrade must carry on activity day in and day out. We have in our league too many "talking" Communists. They will discuss high politics, the revolution in China (this is necessary, too), but try to colonize them for factory work, or get them to collect subs and they will refuse and find one or another excuse. Every comrade must be able to work in every field of activity, to do detailed and technical work, to look upon routine work as a part of the revolutionary activities. We must also bring regularity in our work, to systematize the work and not to work in a haphazard manner. To learn to combine the detailed work with the important work we must bring life into our league, more desire to be active, more study, more enthusiasm—in other words, BUILD THE LEAGUE.

WHILE THE BOSS AINT LOOKIN'

At last our appeals have met response. We received the following, which saves us lots of work:

Say, Gadfly, we'd like to crash into your column. Please answer R. S. V. P. if you will be glad to share your honors with us. Willingiv.

S. Teno.

P. S.—Since you know some things I don't, please, when you R. S. V. P., give me a solution to this:

B asks A for a match. A passes matchbox to B, first shaking same to ascertain if there are any matches in it. B, receiving matchbox, also shakes same to make sure that there are matches in it. B extracts match and uses it. B shakes box again to be certain that she has left some matches in it, and passes box back to A, who shakes it again before putting it into his pocket.

Now, the above process takes place all over the United States actually 181,000,000 times every day. 286,000 horsepower is thus generated daily by constant agitation of matchboxes. But this power is all wasted. How to utilize it—how harness it to a useful commercial purpose?

Which reminds me of what my friend Dia Lectics suggested.

She hates the tribe
Of Styx N. Staab.
They never scribe,
And always gab.

Dia hit on the idea that if these guys descended from Styx N. Staab would apply the energy they use in talking to scribbling off a few contribs to your column, we'd be getting somewhere.

Same to the matchbox shakers!

—S. T.

P. P. S.—I hope you answer this. If I get a reply it will be my first accident, not counting the time I was bitten by a dog. But then that wasn't an accident, because the dog did it on purpose.

We will answer next issue.

The Atheist

By JOHN J. QUAN.

I am, indeed, an Atheist,
Which ev'ryone should be,
Who from religion's falsehood wants
Forever to be free.

Who ever thinks there is a "God"
Must be immensely dense,
For seeing there's no such a thing.
One needs but common sense.

When priests in ages past the myth,
That they called "God" had made,
They then the corner-stone for all
The priestly lies had laid.

They then could say this mythic "God"
Made heaven and the earth,
The sun and moon—and stars and then
Gave living things their birth.

They then could say this fabled "God"
Made herbs and fruit to grow—
Made snakes and apples, so that man
Might good and evil know.

They then could say this myth called
"God."
Everything can do,
And simply make all fools believe,
That what they say is true.

They then could talk of "God" and "Christ,"
And of the "Holy Ghost,"
And of the "angels" and the "saints"—
That "heaven's" mythic host.

They then could tell more foolish lies,
Than could be mentioned here,
As "miracles" and "prophecies,"
The faithful hold so dear.

They then could say the fabled "hell,"
Their mythic "God" had made,
For those who would not gulp their lies,
And e'er be unafraid.

But those who gulp such lies will dance
In slippers made of gold,
On golden floors above the clouds,
And play the harp, they're told.

And then the priests would torture those,
Who'd not believe, to death.
Who begged for pity of those priests
Up to their final breath.

For Roman popish clergymen,
And Protestant as well,
Have killed the noblest folk,
Then sent them to their fabled "hell."

And, hence, the atheists are those
The clergy cannot fool;
And with their supernatural lies
They ne'er—no ne'er can rule.

A bas, then, with the clergymen,
And with their fables all,
About their "Trinity," "Imps," "Hell,"
"Saints," "Heaven," "Angels," fall

FRATERNIZATION

News Briefs

At the International Horse Show now taking place in Chicago there are present the 10 to 16-year-old boy and girl representatives of 610,000 club members of 33 states. Altho these clubs are heralded as Young Farmers' clubs they are not really representative of the great mass of farming youth and children in this country who work on the farms under miserable conditions.

In Niles Center there will be organized a military school to train girls as well as boys. One of the sponsors of the school is the potentially fascist American Legion. The bosses do not discriminate sexually as to who shall fight in their interests in the next war. But neither does the working class.

The third annual boy's week conference is taking place at the Edgewater Beach Hotel, Chicago. Business men and so-called leaders of boys from all parts of the country are in attendance. We suggest that these business men talk less about a "sympathetic attitude towards the life of the boy in all its phases—civic, social, religious and moral" and grant the boys working in their factories a raise in wages, the six-hour day, five-day week and the right to organize into a union. But they'll give you nothing of the kind. You'll have to fight for it.

"There is no such thing as humane war!" This summarizes the opposition of the American Legion to the abolition of the use of poison gas in warfare. This protest was filed with Coolidge. In the next capitalist war the Legion wants to do a thoro job in wiping out worker-soldiers.

Maj. Gen. Amos Fries, main advocate of poison gas warfare, is after the hide of Harry Flury, teacher of biology in Eastern High School, Wash., D. C., because he wrote an anti-capitalist article in a magazine contest. Another example of what we mean when we say "capitalist Class Education."

The annual report of Secretary of Commerce, Herbert Hoover, points out that altho economic conditions were generally satisfactory that this did not effect the New England Textile Industry, two or three sections of the agricultural industry and the bituminous coal industry.

The Botany Mills in Passaic tried to break the ranks of the workers by posting a notice for a 10 per cent increase in wages, without recognition of the union. They thought the workers would return individually, but they were fooled. 1,500 strikers of this mill met in mass meeting, drew up a letter to Green and pointed out that the bosses' move had left their ranks unbroken.

The annual report of the hospital personnel reminds me of the wails of the reactionary members of the Soviet hospital staffs. They complain that the patients want too much. Most of us at one time or another have been in the "free" hospitals of our lovely country. Here the average nurse or doctor or petty official treats the patients with careless contempt. Fool rules which cause intense discomfort are rigidly enforced. The food is poor, tho the same money properly spent would buy good grub. In some hospitals books, magazines, newspapers and cigarettes are strictly forbidden, and there is no comeback.

In workers' Russia the officials are unable to play the tyrant, as any patient can send a complaint to the Communist Party, and if there are too many grievances the superintendent looks for a new job.

Story of Child Labor

ARTICLE V.

THE state that employs the highest percentage of child workers in manufacturing and the like is Rhode Island; then comes Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Illinois.

There are 14 states in this country where children 12, 13, 14 and over are permitted to work more than eight hours per day; and there are likewise 14 states in which child night work is allowed. Thirty-five of the states do not require an eighth grade education before permitting children to go to work.

The wages are extremely low. The average wage for the child worker in the United States is between $6.00 and $8.00 per week. In a study made of child labor in Philadelphia the average wage in factories for boys was found to be $8.00 per week, and for girls between $6.00 and $8.00.

In the Southern Shrimp packing plants conditions are barbaric and the wages ridiculously low. The work begins at any time from three in the morning. The children are in a rickety, damp shed. The air is dangerous and the children often suffer from blood poisoning and the highest wage is $7.00 a week.

In the steel and mining districts life for the working children is dark and miserable. Investigating the conditions in the mines and mills the government's own workers organized the national census bureau. Every time a special study is made of child labor in any particular district the number of children found to be working is always higher than the figures given in the census.

Book Reviews

"Chevrons," by Leonard H. Nason, George H. Doran Company, New York. THIS is an absorbing tale by a sergeant of field artillery. It pictures army life admirably—the aimless, haphazard things that really happen. Sergeant Eadie rejoins his outfit in the summer of 1918. The packs of the battery are lost—all they own, their blankets, overcoats, razors, mess kits, everything. For the next week, hiking about France, the men are busy stealing to replace their stuff. There is a rattling good account of a rough and tumble front line fight. The sergeant after four days of fancy hell, gets back—and is placed in arrest for spending two days too long (much against his will) in the sudden death zone. Fortunately for him, he is saved a lot of argument by a shell, which gives him a belly wound right there. He enjoys a leisurely evacuation and a convalescence "sweetened" by the care of a Red Cross nurse (I knew that nurse myself—I hope she dies a painful and lingering death). The concentration camp is so awful that he lies his way back to his unit. He arrives without a wound stripe and explains that all a stripe brings is a lot of cheap conversation. Some story—the A. E. F. itself.

It is amazing to read "The Human Slaughter House," by Wilhelm Lamsyus, which horrified the Germans thirteen years ago. War as we know it is so infinitely worse than the worst picture of it then. There have been three other war books published worthy to be named after this French album. One is "The Backwash of War," by Ellen La Motte, a horribly vivid series of hospital sketches. The second is "Plumes," by Lawrence Stallings, a story of the mental and physical pain endured by a crippled veteran trying to adjust himself to this fit for heroes' world. The third is this matter of fact picture of army life, "Chevrons." Nason's tale of the

CHICKEN DINNERS FOR MINERS.

THE slashing of the wages of the Hudson Coal Company miners and the other unbearable conditions imposed on them is not an isolated case. Neither are the monthly chicken dinners given for the miners in the company colliery towns in preparation for the organization of a company union, unexplainable. This is the policy in practice of the operators' attempt to smash the United Mine Workers' Union and to lower the standard of living of the coal diggers. Such was the understanding of the National Coal Operators' Association, the recently organized Ohio Coal Operators' Association and other bosses' outfits.

The opening of some of the closed mines was not a sign of the pick-up in the industry. It was only a sign that the operators were shipping scab coal to England and that they wanted to stock up coal in preparation for a strike of the miners in this country, such as is now being threatened by the 22,000 employees of the Hudson Coal Company and which will reach much greater proportions in the spring.

For the young miners there is one lesson in the present situation: Prepare to fight back. That the miners are understanding this lesson can be seen in the growth of the opposition movement in the union which is fighting for Brophy as president as against the reactionary Lewis.

ARMY-NAVY GAME AND MILITARISM.

WE are glad to see that the Chicago Tribune editorializes on the true meaning of the Army-Navy football game played last Saturday in Chicago. They let the cat out of the bag. The game was one huge advertising scheme to foster in the minds of the people a love "for the national defense" of Morgan's millions. "The packed stands," says the Tribune, "cheered for the army, yelled for the navy, in one great breath because they were there not as partisans, but as patriots." The army-navy game in Chicago was a huge signal for all the paid prostitutes of the bankers, steel kings and munition makers to raise a hue and cry for more hectic war preparations—to lament that the man power of the so-called national defense of 550,000 men was only a paper strength, and that Coolidge economy be hanged on the field of capitalist militarism.

We agree that the figure of 550,000 men is a paper figure. It is not overestimated but underestimated by the pious capitalist gentlemen who don the garb of peace mongers to cover their bayonets and poison gas paraphernalia. In the United States there are well over 1,500,000 young men being groomed for military purposes in both the regular and auxiliary armed forces. Eighty-three cents out of every dollar in the national budget is being spent for wars past, present and future. Yet the cry is raised for greater war preparations.

Thus in the army-navy game we see the use to which capitalist sports is put—we see its true meaning. To the youth of the working class it demonstrates clearly the need for building a strong, powerful sports' organization of the working class.

QUESTION BOX

IN the last Question Box Comrade Singer asks: What will happen when all the workers know that they run the factories? My answer to this question is:

When the workers know that they and not the bosses run the factories they will begin to ask themselves: If the bosses are not necessary for the industries, why should we continue letting them own these factories and make profits from the sweat of our toil? Why shouldn't all the useful members of society own the factories and run them for themselves?

This will mean that the working class is becoming revolutionary. It will mean that the workers will fight more and more as a conscious class. In Russia when the working class realized this they took over the factories and set up their own government to run these factories. Now they are developing a new Communist society in which there will no longer be rich and poor, slave and master, and in which society itself will run the industries and develop all the people. That will also finally happen in the United States when the workers realize that they run the factories, and the conditions are ripe for a revolution.

Carl Summer.

There are two questions which I would like answered.

1. Why do we need an international Communist organization?

2. Can the workers elect their own government, thru the ballot box?

The best answers to these questions will be printed. Send them in.

In the Land of Queen Marie

By HENRI BARBUSSE.

JON GRESCEA was a peasant without school education. He knew nothing about the great social problems. All was unknown to him, that was outside that remote corner of the earth, in Rumania, where he was at home.

His parents and all his ancestors had worked on the land estates of the Boyers for centuries. And as far as Grecea could think he had felt himself the property of the Boyars, just as the land was their property. When Grecea reached the necessary age he became a naval soldier. It was at the time of the war. But he did not know what a war was. His circle of interest was limited and he cared for nothing that happened around him. He subjected himself to the orders which he received; he did everything that was demanded of him. He used his rifle on the order of other people and for the purposes of other people, just as he had used formerly his plough and rake. He gained little in education in those dark days, when it was his duty to murder and to take care not to be murdered himself.

One day a worker approached him and gave him a parcel of leaflets with the request that he distribute them among his fellow-soldiers. Grecea did this without knowing what was written on the leaflets, because he could not read and was generally not curious to know things.

These leaflets contained an appeal to the naval soldiers: "Comrades! Naval soldiers! Fellow-workers in uniforms! Do not shoot at your brothers in the Red Army when the Boyars send you into the struggle against Soviet Russia, for Russia is the only workers' state in the world!"

Grecea was discovered during the distribution of the leaflets and arrested.

Before the court martial Grecea told about his childhood and youth. He described his whole life till he came to the army. He pointed out how he had worked like a beast just as all the others around him did, only, as he said, "in order to turn our sweat into gold."

Then he spoke to the military judges about the manifestos. At that time he did not know what he did. Not only that he could not read what was printed on the leaflets—he, who was used to subject himself blindly to the will of others and could develop his own ideas only with difficulty, had not even tried to find out the contents of the leaflets.

But when Grecea told about the people whose acquaintance he had made in prison, people who called themselves Communists. These comrades in suffering enlightened him about the struggle of the workers in which he had unconsciously participated. They pointed out to him the fate of the workers, the terrible senselessness of an order of society in which the producing masses become working animals in the yoke of a small number of exploiters. They explained to him that the realization of Communism would bring about a change of things and mean light, freedom and a better life for the masses of the slaves kept in darkness.

"I tell you," the little peasant Grecea explained, "that I am no more the same man that I was formerly. I have thought of things of which I never thought before and I understood them in suffering—I have become a real man!"

He who easily might have come out of this trial "pure and innocent," by proving his ignorance during his offense, gave with a wonderful greatness of soul a new proof of his "guilt" into the hands of the court. He exposed himself consciously to the most serious punishment, when he, the simple peasant, exclaimed like an apostle: "Communism is something great and if there would really be a god he could not approve of any other order but Communism!"

With deep respect we must collect the words which Grecea spoke in the face of the whole court martial. We can be certain that they will reach above the heads of the judges, the army, the masses of the peasants like Grecea:

"Every son of the Rumanian people, every worker and peasant, every soldier and artisan, all those who tof honestly, must join the Communist Party of Rumania in order to annihilate the vampires and to establish the new rule of the people!"

Grecea was sentenced to five years' hard labor. But not without reason did we say that the most severe punishment awaited him. There are means enough to carry out a death sentence in Rumania, although death punishment officially no longer exists there.

When Mr. Bratianu, at that time Rumanian prime minister, heard of the brave words of Grecea before the court martial, he had a fit of fury. The authorities wanted to do him a favor and attempted to kill Grecea "wilist attempting to escape." However, the attempt failed. A further attempt to murder him was made by means of poison. Thanks to an astonishing piece of luck, Grecea was not killed. Then the police gave him nothing to eat, he was thrown into the wet and narrow hole known under the name of "gherla," fettered at hands and feet.

That induced Grecea to go on hunger strike. But just for that his hangmen had waited, because they wanted to find an opportunity to let him die. However, the other prisoners declared their solidarity with him and went also on hunger strike. The prison director had to give way, because the public abroad and at home began to pay attention. The strike was broken off on the basis of promises. Grecea was taken to the prison hospital.

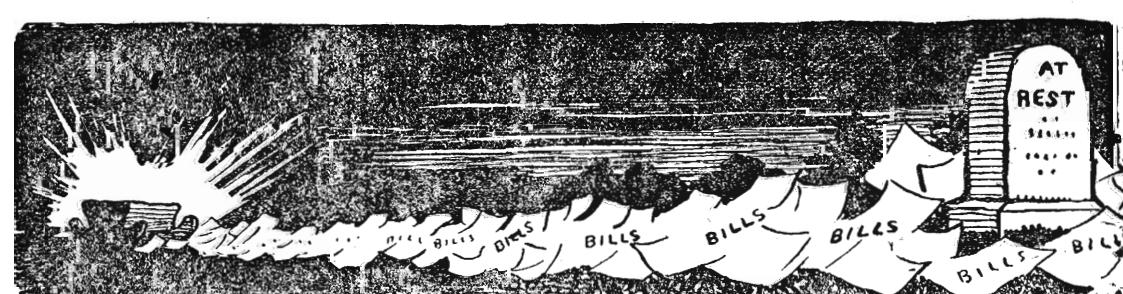

The small buildings of the Doftana prison, which is infirmeria, is a kind of mausoleum, which living people enter, whose dead bodies are later on carried out. The prison doctor, by the way, declares with devilish grin that Grecea is not dead. He is only insane. Grecea, who had risen in order to fling the truth into the faces of his judges, the truth, which he had found in his consciousness as a human being, he is today only a phantom, which moves and carries along with it the corpse of his soul.

FARMERS TURN RADICAL

By E. LAEHTI.

IN the old days the small farmer looked towards the golden west for prosperity. He could not afford to hire outside labor, but worked the soil with his whole family. Now the sun of the golden west has set.

When the war came to an end the world faced an industrial and agrarian crisis. The agrarian crisis was certainly acute. The burden of taxation increased tremendously for the poor farmers. The bankers, railroads and other capitalists left the poor farmers stranded high and dry. Millions were bankrupted in the United States. Here we have the problem of how can the farmer buy highly priced machinery when he can't get what he should for his products?

What has the government done on this question? What did Cal's committee accomplish? Did the cut on income taxes lessen the burden on the small farmer? Both of these questions can be answered with, No! This adds the poor farmer to the rebel elements in our present society.

He owns the "means of production," the small farmer finds that his interests are identical with that of the industrial proletariat. Already the farmers are breaking away from the old capitalist parties and casting in their lot with farmer-labor tickets. In the 1928 elections large numbers of small farmers will support the development of a labor party.

The prospects in the United States are for a strong alliance of the poor farmers and workers which will help to dethrone imperialism and establish a workers' and farmers' government.

New Arrests Without End.

IRA.—The arrests in Bulgaria continue. Every day news arrives about arrests for the most incredible reasons.

In Ferdinand a 16-year-old worker, Sucian Dimitroff, was arrested because he sang a revolutionary song. He was terribly beaten and his arms were broken.

New Sentences Against Young Workers.

RUMANIA.—IRA.—Before the court martial in Kishinev nine young workers were tried who had infringed the martial law. Five of the accused had to be acquitted, two received two years and two one year at hard labor each.

NEWS FROM THE CAMPAIGN FRONT

District Five Scores Again

"YOU'D better get that banner ready and be sure to make it a classy one—pure silk, nothing else will do"—this is what the comrades write from District Five and we are ready to believe them when they say that the banner will adorn their district office—unless something unusual happens and the other districts get a little livelier. This time District Five again leads the army of sub-mitters with 148.8 per cent of their quota filled. Pittsburgh ranks second on the list of leading cities with 213.7 per cent and Monessen fourth with 90 per cent. Comrades—is no one going to try and 'catch' Pittsburgh up? We'd hate not to see a real battle for that banner—what do you say?

NEAR THE TOP.

DISTRICT EIGHT came mighty near to the top this time—95 per cent and Chicago has rolled over with the help of Comrade Ethel Stevens who alone secured 95 subs. Chicago has 106 per cent and is trying hard to catch up with another, district eight, city of Waukegan, which leads all cities with 282 per cent. This district is wide awake, you may be sure of that and hardly a day passes that we don't get a batch from either Waukegan or Chicago. This is the way to work.

DISTRICT THIRTEEN has gone up but not enough to rise from its third place—44 per cent is what they have and that is pretty good, you will have to admit. Los Angeles is working hard and Comrade Komer, the district agent is planning a trip up North to liven things up in Frisco.

SEVEN HAS REAL FEATHER.

DISTRICT SEVEN has a real feather to put in its cap—during the last three weeks they have progressed from the last to the fourth place—something the slow districts should think over. Altho Detroit is the only active city so far, they have been able to get 34.2 per cent filled and still going up. Good for seven!

DISTRICT ONE has lost a place, but we are sure that this is not for long. More speed, comrades—subs don't fall from heaven as we would like them to—they are gotten by working hard only. District one has 26.6 per cent.

TWO BEHIND ONE.

DISTRICT TWO keeps right behind district one—altho to tell you the truth, it ought to be far ahead. New York City is doing well and we have all reasons to believe they will make their quota before the end of the campaign but things are terribly slow in Connecticut and New Jersey. Don't
